NORMANDIE BURNS—Fireboats are seen pouring streams of water into the blazing hulk of the former French liner Normandie as she lay at her Hudson river pier in New York yesterday afternoon. Nearly 2,000 workmen were busy in the huge ship, third largest in the world, when fire broke out. Many of these at first were feared trapped in the hold, and firemen began cutting through the ship's sides at a low level to attempt a rescue. More than 100 were hospitalized.

2,200 Workers, Navy Men Escape Ship's Devastating Inferno

Welder's Torch Blamed as Flames Race Through Former Queen of Seas Despite Battle by Firefighters

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—A devastating inferno touched off by sparks from a welder's torch badly damaged the former French liner Normandie today and left the once proud transatlantic racer listing in the mud of her Hudson river pier.

The roaring flames were brought under control at about 6 p. m. (EWT) and the $60,000,000 vessel, now the United States naval auxiliary Lafayette, presented an awkward, fire-blackened picture as she listed 16 degrees to port in her berth.

For a time it was indicated that the ship might have to be scuttled by opening her sea cocks, but Fire Chief Patrick Walsh expressed belief the ship already rested on the river bottom and that the move was not necessary.

2,200 Aboard Craft.
Of the approximately 2,200 workmen and Naval personnel aboard when the fire started, reports indicated at least 110 were hospitalized and about the same number treated for less serious burns and injuries. One man was reported killed. The Naval hospital reported it had admitted six Navy personnel for treatment.

Father William McDonald, of St. Paul's Roman Catholic church, said he gave last rites of the church to at least 40 men and that five other priests were working with him inside the pier.

Tons of water from every available piece of land and sea-going Manhattan fire equipment were thrown into the gray-clad monster, from which huge billows of mid-night black smoke rose high into a brilliant winter sky to be seen and wondered at by thousands for miles around.

One Naval officer asked police and firemen to cut holes above the vessel's water line through which the torrents of fire-hose water could escape to lessen what he said was the danger of capsizing.

Disaster units from every New York city hospital—many of them only recently set up to cope with possible air raids—were organized at the liner's 50th street pier to care for the injured.

The fire reached five-alarm proportions after its discovery at 2:30 p. m. (EWT) and flames still were eating through what once were richly-appointed salons at 6 p. m. All of the exquisite French furnishings and objects d'art had been removed since the United States took over the ship last December 12.

Early theories that the fire might have been the work of saboteurs were cast aside by Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, commandant of the Third Naval District, who said the flames spread rapidly through the ship from the main lounge of the promenade deck after a spark from an acetylene torch struck a life preserver filled with kapok. (A light inflammable material.) Materials on the ship, he added, "burned like powder."

(Eyewitnesses testified to the startling rapidity with which the flames spread. In-

British Counterattack Seeks To Drive Japs From Singapore

U. S. Receives Record Income Of $89,425,000,000 in 1941

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—(P)—The Commerce Department estimated today that Americans received a record income of $89,425,000,000 last year.

This total, which included wages, dividends, profits and other types, was about $13,700,000,000 more than in 1940 and about $7,000,000,000 more than in 1929.

Income payments, however, fell below national income last year, which was estimated at more than $92,000,000,000. The principal difference between the two figures is the amount of income produced but saved by business during the year.

Salaries and wages totaled $59,879,000,000, an increase of 22 per cent. While wages were generally higher and were paid to more people in most fields of labor, the major increase, 89 per cent, occurred in manufacturing industries. Farm income was about 35 per cent higher. Dividends gained 9 per cent. Relief payments were slightly lower.

Waichow Retaken, Chinese Announce

CHUNGKING, Feb. 9.—(P)—A smashing Chinese counter-offensive against Japanese positions in Waichow, in Kwangtung province, has resulted in the recapture of the East river post city with heavy Japanese losses, a high command communique announced today.

More than 1,000 Japanese defenders of the city were killed and much Japanese material seized, the communique added.

Bitter Battle Rages After Nipponese Forces Land.

By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE,
Associated Press War Editor.

The Japanese, apparently still held in check on Luzon and in the Burma theater, stood upon Singapore island in menacing force last night and the imperial British defenders were at the counter-attack in an urgent effort to prevent a grave extension of the invader's lodgement.

In the savage beginnings of this last great battle for Singapore the enemy had clearly won a considerable initial victory, in having been able to cross the Johore strait with strong forces in the dark hours of early morning.

His troops appeared to be in effective, although strongly disputed, control of a 10-mile stretch extending into the western island from the Kranji estuary along the northern coast. The great question was whether succeeding nights would not cloak additional landings and whether the invader thus could broaden and consolidate the invested area.

The initial invading bodies crossed the strait in vessels apparently adapted for that specific purpose and were sheltered first by powerful artillery fire and later, upon the approach of daylight, by dive bombers which beat back the British lines in some sectors and cleared the way for an enemy infiltration eastward toward the heart of the island.

Major General Henry Gordon Pennett, commanding the Australian forces standing at the head of the British line, loosed a strong counteroffensive and declared late in the day: "The situation is well in hand."

He was less reassuring, however, in adding only that it was hoped to "recover as much as possible of the lost terrain."

While yesterday's British com-

House Rules Out Attempt To Repeal 'Pension Grab' Bill

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—(AP)—An attempt to repeal the recently-enacted congressional pension bill was made in the house today by Representative McLean, Republican, New Jersey, but his repealer—offered as an amendment to the $160,000,000 deficiency appropriation—was ruled out of order.

Representative Smith, Democrat, Virginia, who was presiding, held it violated the house's rule against amendments "not germane" to a measure.

Several repeal bills are pending before committees.

Representative Smith, Republican, Ohio, announced he would file a petition to bring one of the bills to the floor. If 218 members signed his petition, house rules would require immediate consideration of the measure.

Senator Lee, Democrat, Oklahoma, who voted for the original bill, said in a statement he thought the action should be rescinded because the effect had been "very damaging to the morale of the country."

Representative Vinson, Democrat, Georgia, upbraided members who contend they did not know what was in the pension legislation when it was passed by unanimous consent.

"In my judgment," Vinson told the house, "it is a reflection on a member to claim ignorance of what is in a bill."

The Civil Service Commission had issued a statement discussing the act because, it said, "a great deal of misinformation" had been circulated about it.

That statement said a member of congress must have had at least five years of service and have reached age 62 to receive a deferred annuity. It also declared, "those who assert a member of congress can buy a $4,100 annuity on payment of a single premium of $140 speak of a condition that does not and cannot exist."

Today, however, the commission reissued its explanation of the act, with amendments.

On the question of ages, it said "it should be added that immediate annuities are payable after age 55 but on a reduced basis."

On the question of securing an annuity in return for a payment of 5 per cent (about $140) of one day's pay, the commission said:

"It is true that a member of congress could, under the act, receive a substantial annuity on the payment of a small premium. For example, members of congress with five years of service at the end of the present congress and aged 62 could receive an annuity of approximately $500 by any payment which would bring them under the retirement act. Members with longer service could receive a proportionately higher annuity."

2-County Alarm System Approved

A signal system for simultaneously warning every municipality in Fulton and DeKalb counties of an approaching air raid was approved yesterday by defense officials of these two counties.

At a meeting of representatives from every municipality in Fulton and DeKalb counties, the telephone company was authorized to install a communications system for notifying these areas when enemy planes are approaching.

A central district warning office will be set up in Atlanta which will receive information about enemy aircraft directly from the Army. It will then be up to this office to notify the surrounding territory. This will be done by a series of sound signals and lights. The location of the central office cannot be disclosed, but as soon as the news of a pending attack reaches this office it will flash the warning immediately to the municipalities. In this way Decatur or Fairburn will know about the attack as soon as Atlanta.

SEA GIANT ABLAZE—New York's skyscrapers are seen shrouded in smoke from the blazing liner Normandie which burned yesterday at her New York pier, where she was being equipped for use as a naval auxiliary vessel.

A workman said inflammable materials were ignited by a welder's torch, and the flames spread rapidly throughout the craft as firemen sought vainly from the pier and from boats to stem the blaze.

Crown Jewels Of Portugal To Be Seen Here

Gems Will Be Worn by 'Miss Victory' in Red Cross Ball.

As if a $500,000 collection of gems were not enough to burden the young woman who is named "Miss Victory" for the benefit Red Cross ball Monday night, Red Cross officials announced yesterday the crown jewels of Portugal also would be worn by the lucky girl.

The Portugal jewels will be brought here through Maier & Berke, Inc., which arranged for the half-million-dollar collection, it was said. The Atlanta jewelry firm would not reveal the exact value of the Portugal gems.

The gems were those of the Braganza dynasty, which ruled Portugal from 1640 to 1889. All of the crown jewels of the dynasty were inherited by Alfonso, crown prince of Portugal, from his brother, King Carlos, his father, King Luiz, and the Dowager Queen Mother Maria Pia, daughter of Victor Emmanuel II, king of Italy. Upon Alfonso's death in 1919 the jewels were inherited by his wife, Her Royal Highness Nefada of Portugal, Princess d'Braganza, and Duchesse d'Oporto, who brought the treasures to the United States.

Registration of candidates for Miss Victory and her two attendants has been extended through Thursday. Girls desiring to enter the contest may register at Red Cross War Emergency Fund headquarters at 61 Forsyth street between 6 and 9 o'clock each night. The ball will climax the drive for a $320,000 war emergency fund here. Yesterday's contributions pushed the total to $290,634.58, it was announced.

Normandie Burns at Her Pier

Among the vanguard of hundreds of firefighters first to reach the stricken ship was Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, who seldom misses a fire and who had cut short a radio speech to go to the scene.

Tied up at its French line pier since a few days after France entered the war on September 3, 1939, the giant Normandie has been a fixture of the New York scene, viewed by thousands daily from the elevated highway which skirts her mooring place.

She was a proud ship when she first touched New York harbor June 3, 1935, after having broken all trans-Atlantic speed records, later to drop the title to the British Queen Mary.

All during the dark days of France's fall, in the spring of 1940, the Normandie, for which the French people had sacrificed greatly, stood majestically in the Hudson river—a symbol for all to see of the France that was.

All through those early days of the war, her black and gray streamlined exterior and bright funnels brightened a harbor which saw few vessels wearing other than the dark paint of war.

Only after the United States entered the war were the Normandie's bright colors darkened for naval auxiliary purposes.

The German radio broke off a dispatch extolling Professor Albert Speer as successor to the late Dr. Fritz Todt as reichminister tonight and carried the following: "Stockholm—Fire broke out on the 'Normandie,' which is a French passenger liner and the largest ship in the world, it was reported from New York Monday night.

"The 'Normandie' was seized by the United States government and is waiting at New York harbor at the present time to be placed in use as a troop transporter."

The dispatch erred in its claim that the Normandie is the largest ship in the world—an honor she yielded with the launching of the British liner Queen Elizabeth. Before the Queen Elizabeth took to the seas, there was some dispute as to whether the Normandie or the British Queen Mary was the larger—an argument involving such naval specifications as lengths, beams and tonnages.

Student Nurses Are Being Sought

Methodist ministers yesterday were asked to aid in recruiting young women for immediate training in the nation's drive for 50,000 additional nurses.

Several hundred will be trained at Emory University hospital, with a class of 50 to begin March 1.

Mrs. Ivy B. Clifford, of New York, national director of the nurses' enlistment program, made the appeal to the ministers at their weekly meeting here, asking that they help in securing the names of prospective nurses—young women 18 years of age or older who are graduates of accredited high schools. R. S. Hudgins, superintendent of the Emory hospital, introduced Mrs. Clifford.

Auto Crash Fatal To Air Cadet Here

Injuries suffered in an automobile accident near here about 10 days ago caused the death in Lawson General hospital last night of Richard Danforth Brunel, of Bronxville, N. Y., a flight-training student at the Naval Reserve Aviation Base.

Brunel suffered minor injuries and was believed to be recovering when an infection set in. Details of the accident were not learned, except that the accident occurred outside the city.

Brunel was a native of Portland, Maine, and attended Harvard University two years before enlisting in July, 1941. He was 23 years old, and is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Brunel, and a sister.

Attorney Hears About Case, Cleans It Up 50 Minutes Later

Harvey H. Tysinger Quickly Finds Flaw in Aliens' Charges Against Fulton County's Sheriff Mount, Prepares Response, Clears Officer.

Something in the nature of an all-time speed record was set in federal district court yesterday by Assistant District Attorney Harvey H. Tysinger.

At 11 o'clock he was appointed by Judge E. Marvin Underwood to defend Sheriff J. M. Mount, of Fulton county, in habeas corpus proceedings brought by two aliens recently released from federal prison and held at Fulton Tower for deportation adjudication.

It was the first Attorney Tysinger had heard of the cases.

He sent for the papers, studied them piercingly, found a hole in each and prepared responses.

The first plaintiff, John P. Spanos, was an undesirable alien, being a twice-convicted conveyer of stolen securities, therefore the law made no provision for his suing under a pauper's oath.

The other, Sam Porto, not only was in a like situation, having twice been convicted of counterfeiting, but was an enemy alien, to boot, being an unaturalized Italian. Under the law he had no constitutional rights, Tysinger contended.

He not only obtained favorable rulings from the court, but cleared his immediate client, the sheriff, by setting forth that the men really were in the custody of Fred E. Beorner, immigration and naturalization inspector.

Finished, he consulted his watch.

It was 11:50 o'clock. Final disposition of the cases will be made tomorrow. It was indicated Spanos would be adopted by sponge fishermen in Florida, while Porto's fate was likely to be an internment camp.

Georgia CCC Concentrating On War Work

10 Camps Already Established in Military Areas.

The Civilian Conservation Corps, although unchanged in its setup and direction, is being centered increasingly upon the national war effort.

Burton M. Graham, liaison officer for the southeast, announced yesterday that 10 CCC camps have been established in military areas in Georgia, at the instance of Army authorities, and 22 more are being sought. In the southeast, embracing the Fourth Corps Area, 41 have been approved or are in operation, and 68 others are wanted.

Each unit averages 165 men.

Work done by the CCC units includes construction of roads and trails about military reservations, combat ranges, parachute landing fields and units for bayonet and target practice, erosion control, camouflage and other types of construction and maintenance work.

Because of the volume of work requested by the Army, it was declared likely that the total number of CCC camps in the state will be increased, their locations being shifted to military reservations.

It was believed that some camps will be reserved to national forests and parks to preserve from fire timber needed in prosecuting the war.

are continuing to earn revenue," Johnson asserted.

If the gas industry during the war should lower its standards of efficient operation and service, Johnson said "our industry may receive a blow that could well be the beginning of the end of private ownership of utilities."

Urging the gas company executives to measure up to the test, the speaker warned "we to the industry that has incurred disfavor with the public during the war period. It will be the first to face destruction."

Urges Conservation.

"On the other hand, if we measure up to our responsibilities, if we conserve materials—if we economize and avoid waste of money and manpower—if we loyally aid all such worthy war movements as the defense bond sales campaign, the USO, civilian defense, the Red Cross, etc.—if we continue to give efficient and courteous service—if we maintain a constructive program of institutional advertising, and if we plan wisely and courageously to meet and solve the problems of this war period—if we do these things at the same time that many other businesses are failing to meet similar tests—we will have won the respect and support of the public," he said.

Johnson outlined the many ways gas companies can conserve materials, urging all companies to co-operate to the utmost.

Hawley and Owens, too, in their speeches warned against complacency on the part of the public and urged all-out efforts to win. They emphasized the duty of their industry officials in assuming leadership in civilian defense and in doing all possible to speed war production.

Meanwhile, H. Carl Wolf, president of the Southern Gas Association, who is president of the Atlanta Gas Light Company and president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, announced that his association, the Mid-Southeastern Gas Association, and the Florida and South Georgia Gas Meters Association have created a southern regional committee for coordinating the co-operation of the gas industry with war activities.

Laura Ingalls Is Pictured as Spy, Patriot

Attorney Says She Posed as Nazi Sympathizer To Aid U. S.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Laura Ingalls, noted speed flyer, was variously portrayed in district court today as a propaganda agent trying to usher Hitler's "new order" into the United States and as an egotistical patriot conducting a one-woman campaign of counter-espionage against the Nazis.

These conflicting pictures were given to a jury by prosecution and defense as Miss Ingalls, 38, once the women's transcontinental speed champion, went on trial on charges of failure to register with the State Department as an agent of the German Reich.

In an opening statement to the jury, M. Neil Andrews, special assistant to the attorney general, said Miss Ingalls was "an intense German sympathizer" and a "missionary for the Nazi cause."

To back these statements, he produced two witnesses. One Dr. I. Daniel Shorel, New York plastic surgeon, said he operated on Miss Ingalls in New York last March. While she was in the hospital, he said, Miss Ingalls declared she was preparing for the day when Hitler would bring his new order to America.

Dudley Steele, airport manager from Burbank, Cal., testified to a conversation along the same lines which, he said, had so impressed him that he made notes of Miss Ingalls' remarks for possible future use.

Prosecutor Andrews said Miss Ingalls received money directly and indirectly from Baron Ulrich von Gienanth, second secretary of the German embassy.

But James Reilly, defense counsel, declared that Miss Ingalls' aim was not to benefit Hitler but to thwart him. Three times, he said, she tried to convince the FBI that it ought to give her work as a counter-espionage agent, and when she was turned down, she decided to do it on her own.

It was true, Reilly asserted, that the defendant had taken German money and expressed sympathy for the Nazi cause but that was merely a misguided effort to ingratiate herself so she could pry from the Nazis information of value to the United States.

Lipscomb-Ellis Firm Awarded $50,000 in Suit

Realty Company Collects on Two $25,000 Life Insurance Policies.

An employer has a right to insure the life of an employee and to collect even though the employee has severed relations with the company before his death, Judge A. L. Etheridge ruled yesterday in Fulton superior court.

His decision gave the proceeds of two $25,000 life insurance policies, taken out on the life of the late A. B. Chapman, Atlanta real estate dealer, to the Lipscomb-Ellis Company.

E. M. Chapman, executor of the estate of A. B. Chapman, had contended the $48,334.50 proceeds from the two policies should be paid to the estate.

Judge Etheridge declared the two policies on Chapman's life were taken out in December, 1929, by the Weyman Mortgage Company and Weyman & Connors, a corporation, and both policies were assigned later to Lipscomb-Weyman-Chapman Company, now the Lipscomb-Ellis Company.

Chapman, an employee and officer of the two companies when the policies were written, severed all business relations with the succeeding company in April, 1937, but the Lipscomb-Ellis Company

Boy Scouts Entertain Atlanta Rotarians

Boy Scout day was observed at the Rotary Club's weekly luncheon at the Ansley hotel yesterday.

Under the direction of Weaver Marr, local Scout director, several troops put on scouting demonstrations.

Troop 30, East Atlanta, showed how the youngsters can handle defense equipment and tell their elders what to do in an emergency. Troop 117, Hapeville, demonstrated their own invention—a stretcher easily assembled and easy to handle—with a casualty on it.

Troop 5, Buckhead, showed how a Boy Scout bicycle patrol can operate—as a messenger service and otherwise.

continued to pay the premiums on the $50,000 worth of insurance. Chapman died September 30, 1941.

His executor claimed the Lipscomb-Ellis Company had no insurable interest in Chapman's life, as a constructive trustee, and sought the insurance—less $4,903, which was paid by Lipscomb-Ellis after 1937.

Judge Etheridge asserted the original companies taking out the insurance had a right to assign it to persons or companies having no insurable interest in Chapman's life.

"To hold otherwise would be to put a party to a valid contract, under which obligations were assumed and substantial rights were acquired, in constant danger of loss which he would be helpless to prevent," the judge stated in awarding the entire proceeds to the Lipscomb-Ellis Company.

In his statement, Judge Etheridge said $17,500 had been paid on the policies by the insurers.

Roosevelt Puts Land in Charge Of All Shipping

F. D. R. Signs Navy Bill; 22 Billions Asked for Army.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—(P)—Admiral Emory S. Land became virtually a czar over all phases of wartime merchant shipping today.

Creating a War Shipping Administration to control operations of ocean-going merchant vessels, President Roosevelt named to head it the 63-year-old retired naval officer who already is chairman of the Maritime Commission, which directs the mammoth emergency ship-building program.

Thus Land was charged with the responsibility not only of turning out cargo ships needed to win the war, but also of seeing that these completed are used to the best advantage.

The President issued an executive order creating the shipping administration in between signing a bill appropriating $26,495,265,474 for the Navy and forwarding to congress a request for $22,888,901,800 for the Army.

In a separate message, the chief executive also asked that congress repeal that section of the neutrality act prohibiting American citizens from purchasing or selling bonds and securities of belligerents.

Senator Austin, Republican, Vermont, said repeal was desired because the section banned American purchases of Canadian securities.

Along with the Army appropriation, President Roosevelt asked congress for $502,000,000 in cash for the Maritime Commission and requested that it be authorized to make contract obligations totaling $2,350,000,000 additional.

The commission's plans call for construction of about 850 ships aggregating 8,000,000 tons this year, with the pace stepped up to 10,000,000 tons next year.

They had their initial bout with the new war time yesterday and as they eased into bed at an early hour last night many of them didn't know who had won—the clock or themselves—but they practically unanimously agreed that they had a new reason for hating the Japs.

"I'm a clock-watching automaton, that's what I am!" cried one young wife and mother scurrying down Alabama street. "If the defense program gets as much work out of the factories as it's getting out of me, the war will be over in no time. Four breakfasts—that's what I cooked—four breakfasts. Can you imagine?"

Screwy Place.

The young woman in the coil and uniform of the Red Cross was typical of hundreds of her sisters the city over. Breakfast, the meal that sets the pace for the day, set a bewilderingly screwy pace for many housekeepers. There was papa who had to get to his desk, his machine or on his milk or bread route at the crack of dawn; little brother who is in the fifth grade and doesn't have to set out to school until 9 o'clock, and Cousin Mary who works in a downtown department store and doesn't have to be there until 10 o'clock, all war time.

Somewhere in there mother got herself a piece of toast and some coffee and got into her uniform in preparation for a day at direct defense duty. But under the new schedule before she had her day's program under way, it was time to head home and start dinner for the early arriving family.

Seven Breakfasts.

Mrs. Julia Farr, operator of a boarding house at 1129 West Peachtree, has a schedule that would throw any regular housekeeper into a panic. She fed her boarders in seven batches before sending them to their day's occupations.

"I think I must have gotten up at something like 3:30," yawned Mrs. Farr. "The sailors who go out to Camp Gordon were the first to go. Then I had a young woman who works in a school office and the rest of my business people go at completely different hours. I served seven breakfasts to 12 people. The worst part of it is that my cook doesn't come until 7 o'clock."

But Mrs. Farr, a pretty widow, is going to end all her multi-breakfast troubles. She is going to leave her boarding house at the end of this week and go to Miami to get married. Breakfast for two will be considerably simpler.

One Nonconformist.

Mrs. G. F. Willis, of 1760 Peachtree road, had little trouble adjusting her schedule to Uncle Sam's, but she reported, a little proudly, that her young son is a nonconformist.

His sisters may go to school at 9:30 instead of 8:30, but he has devoted his few months to getting himself a schedule and he wants his bottles and his naps at the same old time—you can call it what you like, war time.

Mrs. Ina A. Wycott, of 1137 Oak street, S. W., prepared three breakfasts for her family, but she is inclined to look at the whole thing as good discipline for the city slickers.

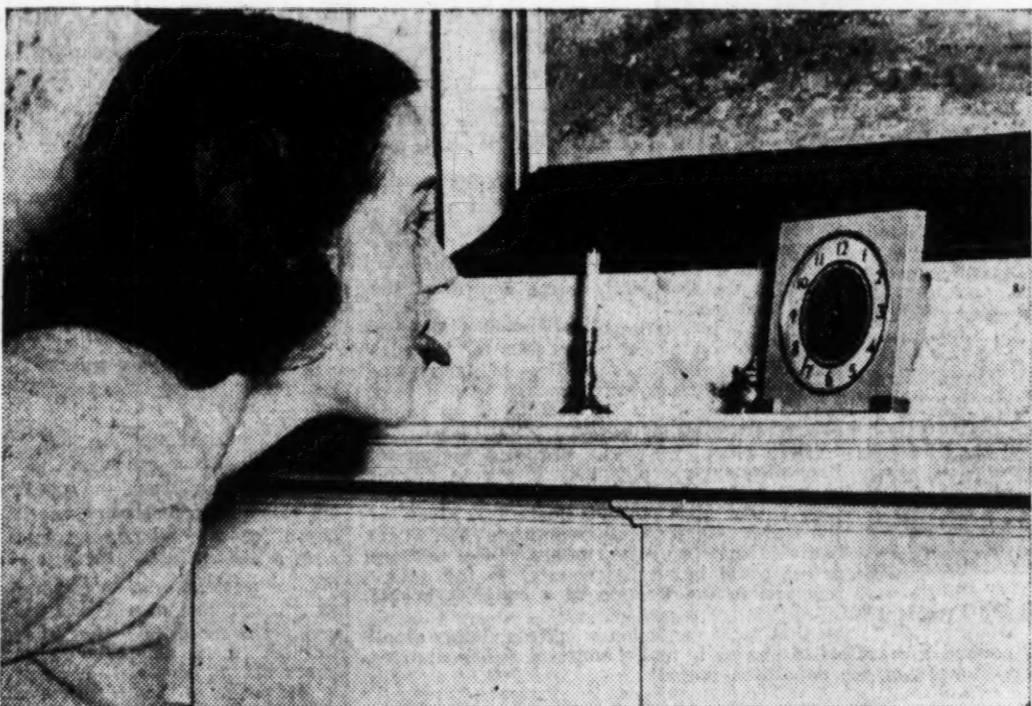

"The joke's on us," laughed Mrs. Wycott. "We've called the farmer a hayseed or a rube for years, but he is the only one that had sense enough to get up and start his work before dawn without having the President tell him to!"

No matter how you stagger your own work hours—be sure your business mail is dispatched at the same hour on your office clock face as heretofore. Otherwise, you'll disrupt the mails and delay deliveries.

Admiral Standley New Soviet Envoy

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—(P)—President Roosevelt named Admiral William Harrison Standley, retired, as ambassador to Moscow today, thus for the second time choosing a high naval officer to handle this country's interests in a key European capital.

About a year and a half ago Admiral William D. Leahy was sent as ambassador to Vichy, to move to keep France from full collaboration with the Axis.

Nomination of Standley, former chief of naval operations, to fill the vacant Moscow post was submitted to the senate for confirmation, and indications were that it would meet with little, if any, opposition in view of the admiral's record of service in the Navy and the fact that in the past few months he has become something of an authority on lease-lend affairs.

The Moscow assignment was last held by Laurence A. Steinhardt.

45,000 Fulton Citizens Ill-Fed, Agent Asserts

Means of Combatting Malnutrition Cited by S. D. Truitt.

There are 45,000 hungry people in Fulton county, S. D. Truitt, county agent, told more than 400 women gathered at the Atlanta Woman's Club yesterday for a county-wide forum on nutrition in defense.

There are 45,000 who are known not to get enough to eat, and the number actually, Truitt said, is more than 75,000.

What to do about it, he said, and how to provide proper food for them, is a question that concerns everybody, for hunger breeds disease and disease and hunger combined are the twin evils that keep the relief rolls burdened.

Cause Is Poverty.

Yet, he pointed out, the cause of the hunger is simply poverty, and to attack the problem of malnutrition at its root you have to attack it from the economic standpoint, meanwhile teaching people to get the most food and the most nourishing food for what little money they have.

Hunger, in the sense of malnutrition is not a disease of the poor alone, however, Dr. John B. Fitts pointed out. Selecting the proper quality of foods and balancing the diet to provide all the essentials the body needs is as important, almost, as having quantity enough, he said.

Speaking to an audience which included many women active in the school lunch program, Dr. Frank Lamons, Atlanta dentist, charged in many school cafeterias the children didn't bother with nutritious foods prepared for them. They spent their nickels on desserts instead.

An answer to this was not long in coming. Mrs. Berna J. Abercrombie, supervisor of the school cafeterias in Atlanta, said this was not the case in the city school cafeterias. Their children, she said, got desserts only after they had bought the balanced plate lunch.

Dr. Lamons wanted to know if they ate their balanced plate lunch or if they just took it and then ate the dessert, ignoring the spinach and the carrots.

Mrs. Abercrombie said they ate it all.

House Pledges Investigation of OCD Activities

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—(P)—An inquiry into alleged "boondoggling" in the Office of Civilian Defense was promised today as the house wrote a stern rebuke to the agency into an appropriation bill providing $100,000,000 for gas masks, firefighting and other equipment.

Its rebuke was conveyed in an amendment forbidding the use of the funds for "instructions in physical fitness by dancers, fan dancing, street shows, theatrical performances, or other public entertainments" which sponsors hoped would oust from the setup Melvyn Douglas, the movie star, Mayris Chaney, dancing friend of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, and others under fire.

Officials said, however, that since the funds in this particular bill could not be spent for such purposes anyway, the amendment would not cause the dismissal of the OCD employees, whose salaries are paid out of another appropriation.

The bill as a whole, carrying $160,412,611 in all for various war purposes, was passed on a voice vote and sent to the senate.

Such expressions as these were belittled through the house microphones.

"Gas masks before boondoggling! Billions for defense but not one cent for folly!"—Representative Meyer, Democrat, Maryland.

"How can we expect the people to take the war seriously when the management of Civilian Defense is turned over to hoochie-koochie and fan dancers?"—Representative Cox, Democrat, Georgia.

"Billions for defense but not one buck for Donald Duck!"—Representative Taber, Republican, New York.

The day also brought a virtual challenge by Mrs. Roosevelt, assistant director of the OCD, that the congressional critics give her "the courtesy of appearing and discussing" the matter.

"They have offices and I have feet," the first lady told her press conference, which was opened to men reporters as well as women today in view of the OCD tangle.

La Guardia Blocks Dancer's Appointment

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—(P)—Mayor F. H. La Guardia told questioners today he had blocked the appointment of Mayris Chaney, Philadelphia dancer and friend of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, to the morale division of the Office of Civilian Defense in New York last December.

The mayor, also OCD director, told newspapermen it was "substantially correct" that he had failed to approve the assignment at a salary of $12.70 daily. No reason was given.

Many Citizens Are Confused By New Time

Business Slips Smoothly Into War Schedules, However.

By The Associated Press.

The nation's business slipped smoothly into war time yesterday but some of its citizens didn't.

The tardy rolls in many schools increased. ("My folks forgot to change the clock.")

Some homes started out with too much war time. (Mother pushed the hand ahead one hour when she went to bed early Sunday night; Father, coming in later, advanced it another, and daughter, back from a movie, pushed it up another hour. So the family got up at 4 a. m., standard time.)

Sentence Shortened.

Forty-five guests at the Dallas, Texas, jail—staying over the weekend to sober up—found the time transition had whittled an hour off their sentences.

The Denver, Col., police department advanced the clocks but forgot to move up the time for turning on the automatic traffic lights. Result: Big morning traffic jam.

The White House clocks fell into line—all except one old grandfather's clock that still ticked off the hours of standard time yesterday.

The management at the Tacoma, Wash., city hall had calls from the taxpayers. The city hall clock was one hour behind.

Pay Roll Problem.

Some war production plants had a problem arising out of the time change at 2 a. m. yesterday morning. The question was whether to pay men on the 12 midnight to 8 a. m. shift for seven or eight hours. They reported on standard time, left by war time to make way for the morning shift.

At Idaho Falls, Idaho, a school bus driver passed up two children waiting along a rural road. Called to account, he said, "It was so dark I couldn't see them."

Yegg Is Foiled.

Some would-be safe cracker at Houston, Texas, forgot to change his schedule. A laundry owner came down on new time to open for business. He found the knob knocked off the safe and fresh tracks leading from the door, evidence that he had disturbed the cracksmen by the early showup.

A Stillwater, Okla., vicar was puzzled Sunday morning when an appeared for what he thought was 8 o'clock communion service. His wife explained to him that the clock change wasn't due until Sunday night; he had set it ahead on Saturday night.

Defense Housing

It is self-evident that, with the concentration of population around centers where Army camps are located or where great developments in war industry are under way, the problem of housing the workers becomes a paramount item of the national war effort.

It is interesting to note, therefore, to construct housing for war workers and fighting forces in the six southeastern states, a total of $45,545,030 had been allotted by the Federal Works Agency during the first year of operation under the defense housing act. Of this total, $27,610,162 was for 43 defense housing communities; $17,547,609 for 136 defense public works projects and $387,259 for 15 maintenance and operation projects. Most of these last are schools, absolutely essential for the children of war workers and Army families concentrated in these areas.

The most interesting feature of the report, perhaps, is that dealing with the manner in which defense housing projects are approved. None are made upon a basis of community application, but only after most careful study of the need, with the number of houses required actually specified. It is important to note, in this respect, that out of a total of 3,396 applications for defense public works, only 768 were approved. Another important fact is that, in the great majority of projects, the work was done by local contractors, living within the state where the project is located.

Georgia, of these six states, received total allotments of $7,927,666. Of this $1,472,418 went in wages for 1,954,077 man hours of labor. The average hourly wage in Georgia was 75 cents which, however, does not compare so favorably with the national average, which was 98 cents an hour.

"Slum clearance" projects are, it is understood, barred for the duration of the war. "Defense housing," to provide workers and men of the armed forces, takes its place.

There can be no denying that this war housing activity is very vital to our program for victory. As that program accelerates it will, undoubtedly, have to increase. For it will become more urgent, more essential, in direct ratio to the expansion of the war effort.

A Problem of Profits

That shipbuilding companies and other manufacturers engaged in the work of national defense are sometimes between the devil and the deep blue sea may be deduced from testimony of a Todd Shipyards spokesman before the Senate Naval Committee this week.

Explaining that the low capitalization of his company made any profits on its enormously expanded production seem excessive, J. E. Barnes, the spokesman suggested that the congress undertake to tax these excess profits back into the public treasury.

It will be noted the company was engaged before the war chiefly in ship repairs and that the government provided the funds for expansion of its facilities, insisting the firm engage in shipbuilding. This cannot be criticized, and neither should the company be criticized for accepting the task. It is difficult to determine upon which party should fall the responsibility for determining how such a matter could be adjusted.

Some members of the committee sought to make capital of the situation in which the company found itself. Yet an enormously increased volume of business without increased capitalization could result only in profits which seem out of line.

The shipyard's official struck the right note in suggesting it was up to congress to make sure the company did not make an excessive profit.

The Pay Roll Savings Plan

There are three major purposes in the national purchases of Defense bonds and stamps. These are to help finance and win the war, to halt inflationary trends in our currency and to provide a safe investment for every citizen.

In order to accomplish these ends, it is essential that every American join in the plan. That means, that every American set aside a certain proportion of his income for the regular purchase of these bonds and stamps.

For employed workers, the simplest way to do this is through the Pay Roll Savings Plan. By this means, each pay day the employer deducts the sum specified by the employee from the pay envelope and invests it in Defense bonds for that employee. Thus it becomes automatic and comparatively easy.

Even those making small wages would be able to "get along," if, for some other reason, their pay was reduced $1 a week. They can reduce it themselves by putting that $1 weekly in Defense stamps, through the Pay Roll Savings Plan. True, they will then have to "get along" on $1 less per week. But they will have the satisfaction of knowing they are contributing to their nation's victory, are helping to keep stable the home economic front and are laying up for themselves an investment which will be very welcome and useful in the years of later life that are to come.

There are 40,000,000 regularly employed persons in the United States. So far some 14,000 business firms, employing 15,000,000 persons, have adopted or are arranging to adopt, the Pay Roll Savings Plan. If the remaining 25,000,000 will join the same plan, the prosecution of the war to successful conclusion will be tremendously accelerated. Buying Defense bonds is not the limit of our aid to win the war—but it is an important and necessary primary step.

Arrange for your regular purchases of this investment in freedom and security, today.

How Much Sugar? Under Oath

How many men and women are there in Atlanta, in Georgia, who will deliberately lie, for the sake of a few pounds of sugar? How many will insist that they, when to do so involves the crime of perjury?

If present plans of the government for sugar rationing are carried out, the sugar hoarders, who have contributed to the shortage of the commodity, will either have to admit their selfishness and disloyalty, or commit perjury.

The plan is to issue sugar rationing stamps, permitting each individual to purchase 12 ounces of sugar per week. At the time these stamps are issued, the applicant will be required to state, under oath, how much sugar he has on hand. If he has ten, twenty, or any other poundage, that much will be deducted from his ration stamps.

The plan is perfectly fair and right. It is intended to conserve the nation's supply of sugar and to see that everyone gets his fair allotment of the stocks on hand. Thus none need go without and thus the effect of the enemy attempt to cut us off from supplies will not succeed in creating dissatisfaction and unrest among any of us.

Those who have, by trick and artifice, secured excessive stocks of sugar, intending to safeguard their own comfort at the expense of others, will, when the plan goes into effect, either have to forego their unfair advantage, or lie, under oath. Which no honorable man or decent woman will do.

HOUSEWIVES WHO HOARD

(From The Cobb County Times)

Listen to the women chattering about the scarcity of this and that food item. The wild and silly stories that get about would be funny if they weren't serious. Like the one about no more canned pineapple since one family bought all 19 cans in a local store. Shuck! That same story is being told in each section of Atlanta to our certain knowledge... only it's a different local store where it happens each time!

And if we never had another can of pineapple, what in the deuce would be the difference? Would it be worth getting excited about and rushing out and buying up what is in sight and spreading a panic condition? Not by any means!

You and I hear of housewives buying a lot of sugar and flour against the day when it can't be bought or prices will be prohibitive. And it IS happening—too often.

Don't let it happen in your house if you want to be thought a person of common sense, let alone a patriot.

Common sense should tell you that such tactics cause shortages, cause price advances. And common sense should tell you that if you get a lot of sugar and flour or what-have-you laid up and thereby cause a shortage, your government would have no hesitancy in taking it away from you for those who need it a darn sight more than you do—our men in the armed forces.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

BARS PARTISAN APPEALS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—President Roosevelt has set the tempo for the 1942 congressional campaign by ruling out any strictly partisan appeal for the election of a Democratic house and senate.

In doing so he has effectively scotched whatever hopes the Republicans had of seeing the present administration make the same mistake as President Wilson, whose appeal to the country for the election of a Democratic congress in 1918 resulted in the Democrats losing control of the house that year.

The role Mr. Roosevelt has adopted for himself in the coming campaign calls for the only part of congressmen, regardless of party, who will back up the government and who have a record of backing up the country in an emergency regardless of party.

Before the President's clarifying statement, Republicans were obviously trying to exploit certain declarations contained in a speech a few days earlier by Chairman Edward J. Flynn, of the Democratic national committee. Mr. Flynn had said that "no misfortune except a military defeat could befall the country to the extent involved in the election of a congress hostile to the President."

He went on to say that "vast confusion would inevitably result if we had a President of one party and a house of representatives, for example, of the opposition party."

MUCH TRUTH

There is, of course, much truth in what Chairman Flynn said. He may have put a paragonable emphasis on the scope of the "misfortune" befalling the country with the election of a hostile congress in the election of our war efforts, but it requires no imagination to see how such a development would be construed or exploited by the Axis nations.

Not only this. It would have a tremendous effect on the morale of our Allies. Many of them would interpret it as the forerunner of a slackening pace on our part.

The President's statement does not close the door to his personal participation in the campaign. It simply means that he will not go before the country with a strictly partisan appeal for the election of Democrats. He will set the yardstick of administration approval and let the country apply it.

If it becomes necessary to reduce the proposition to individual cases, it means that such Republicans as Representative James W. Wadsworth, of New York, a staunch supporter of the Roosevelt foreign policy and one of the ablest members of the house, will carry the administration's blessing, while those of the isolationist ilk of Representative Ham Fish would be marked with disfavor.

By the same token, many obstructionist Democrats cannot count on the President's support—may even face his open opposition.

WON'T ENTER TRAP

Mr. Roosevelt is too old a hand at politics to be caught in such a trap as the Republicans sought to make of the Flynn utterance. He may get caught once but never twice. Having lived through the mistake of the Wilson administration, there never was any danger of the Wilson administration. The Republicans are guilty of scaling preposterous heights of optimism by ever entering the trap he would. Master political strategist of them all, he laid the ghost of 1918 before it could materialize.

As a matter of fact, the 1942 situation is so far different from that of 1918 that Republicans themselves admit privately there is little or no hope of them capturing the house under the best of conditions. In the 1918 election the Republicans had to make only one vote to get the Democratic majority. Control was held by the Democrats then only by virtue of the support given them by a small group of third-party members who formed the balance of power. President Wilson had won his second election in 1916 by the narrowest of margins. The Democrats had retained the house by the same kind of margin.

WAS EASIER THEN

Relatively, therefore, it was a much easier matter for the Republicans to win than it is today. The Democratic majority in the present house is around 100, which means the Republicans would have to gain 50 seats to upset control. With the issue of their patriotism questioned by the Wilson appeal, the Republicans came out of the 1918 election with a house majority of about 40. They also gained a total of 10 seats in the senate, which was enough to give them a one-vote control.

The organization of the senate is hardly affected by the coming November elections. So great is the present Democratic majority that it is almost a mathematical impossibility to lose it, counting seats to be filled from Democratic strongholds of the south.

Will You Cross Picket Lines?

Some weeks ago Eleanor Roosevelt refused to enter the New York theater because the Musicians Union had "picketed" the place. Instead, the first lady of the land demurred, and got money back for the tickets of her party.

In That Instance.

In the instance of the picketed theater Mrs. Roosevelt refused to enter, the facts in the case are interesting.

The show was one which requires no music. It did not use an orchestra at all. Until a touch of music became desirable after the United States entered the war. The management thought it proper, then, that the national anthem be played at each performance. So a photograph was secured with a record of "The Star-Spangled Banner." It requires a little less than two minutes to play. In order to comply with union regulations a union musician was employed, at some $80 a week, just to place that record on the machine and have it thus played once at each performance.

It was then the musicians' union demanded the theater employ an orchestra of four or five men, at weekly salaries aggregating almost $400, just to play the national anthem.

Such a drain on his box office receipts would have more than absorbed all profit on the production, the theater owner refused to do so. The management rightfully refused—and the place was picketed.

Thus Mrs. Roosevelt honored a picket line which was, in actual fact, objection to the playing of the national anthem. Not a nice thought, is it?

There are Lines, —And Lines. Personally, if employees have starvation wages, or are otherwise misused, I'll sympathize with their pickets.

But, especially in time of war, I'll not sympathize with picketing for any other cause. Not for a "closed shop," for instance. Nor do I think we should encourage the picketed proprietor by patronizing his establishments when we know the union demands are unfair or, even, when we don't know anything about the case.

If I was in New York I'd make it a point, if I could, to patronize that same theater and to join in, as strongly as voice permits, the singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner" to the music of that phonograph record.

Shortage of Skilled Men

DETROIT, Feb. 9.—Discussing a shortage of skilled men for the war trades, the personnel man of one of the big motor companies, who deals in workers by the thousand head, remarked that a smaller company had appealed to him for help. The little company needed machinists and without them could not deliver on time the mechanism which was its allotted task in the whole armament scheme.

"They begged me," he said, "to lend them 300 of my men."

A half hour later, the personnel man's boss, discussing another phase of production, remarked with a note of reproach, that the big unions claim men for their own as though the men were property. The more men they control through their closed shop and check-off agreements, the greater the power of the boss unionists over both the men and industry. If they call them out on strike they can be impersonal toward the thousands of families because the individuals are not men to them in the human sense but just so many ciphers, with no voice in the matter. The successful organizing strike, a common device, called for the purpose of driving out the union x-thousand more men employed at an unorganized plant, who desperately don't want to join, increases the power of the union boss and the strikers go hungry with their families and obey orders with little complaint.

Men As Property

When the boss had explored this thought I said the personnel man's talk of lending the machinists had revealed a similar impersonality and sense of property in men, although not the same brutality. I believe we all agreed that the industry did think of workers by the drove or herd, subject to loan.

The boss of the great corporation, an old-time showworker himself, then said the downright feudalism in this country existed in the baseball business where the man is, frankly, just property on the hoof. He did not say, but I often did when I was doing sport, that this serfdom was the very foundation of the amusement which for more than 40 years has been regarded as the national game of the freest country on earth. Twenty years ago the standard baseball contract was attacked in court but it must have been upheld because it is still the standard form. Briefly, once a player signs, he becomes property and may be sold and must work for his next owner at the owner's terms but, growing old or being hurt, may be fired on 10 days' notice. He is scheduled as property of a certain value in his owner's assets and tax reports. The owner can claim depreciation on the player as his talent and sinews decline with the player, being, for his own tax purposes, a man, can claim no such depreciation. The player can't solicit a better job and the owners have a written conspiracy, with penalties provided, whereby no owner may approach another owner's player with an offer of a better job.

"Those Men Belong to Me"

A few years ago a case was reported from the low minors in which one player was taken in trade for a bird dog and another for a satchel of new and used baseballs.

Some employers using masses of men prefer to do business with the unionists. They agree on wages, hours and conditions and the union very efficiently delivers the labor at the gates on time, of a fair average skill and reasonably sound of mind and limb.

Dave Beck, the Seattle teamsters' unioner, startled me once by exclaiming angrily of the brewery drivers, "Those men belong to me." He meant that his union claimed jurisdiction but he said, "Those men belong to me," and he meant that, too.

Last Saturday, the Chicago Daily News, which belongs to Colonel Francis P. Smith, discussed the conscription of civilians for work and soothingly remarked that a Gallup poll "shows that a majority of our citizens are willing, in the war emergency, to let the government call the worker 'what job, where and how much.'"

What do you think of that?

Word Stories.

By W. Worthington Wells.

A reader of "Word Stories" from Wisconsin wishes us to use the word CHIMERICAL in one of our releases. We invite letters from readers who cannot secure satisfactory definitions from their home dictionaries. We will attempt to give you a clear definition, the correct pronunciation, and a few simple sentences showing how the word is most frequently used by present-day writers.

CHIMERICAL. Chimerical is an adjective pronounced chi-MER-i-cal with the accent on the second syllable. (Chi) is pronounced like (ki) in the long (i). (Mer) is pronounced with a short (e) like that in merit.

The fantastic, fire-eating animals of mythology were chimerical. That is, they were purely imaginary and had no basis in fact. Sea monsters, Chinese dragons and other imaginary objects are chimerical. Visionary people frequently concoct chimerical projects that are, in fact, impossible, impractical and frequently absurd.

Lives and rights has been determined. It was learned authoritatively after today's cabinet meeting that in the event President Wilson goes before congress again it will not be to ask for a declaration of war, but to follow literally the words of the address in which he announced the break of diplomatic relations and request authority to use means deemed necessary to protect American seamen and people."

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

WE'VE GOT TO GET TOUGH

The liner Normandie burned yesterday. There can be no doubt, when all the information is at hand, that saboteurs did the job.

The sabotage which we knew in the last war will return again in worse and greater form. Loss of the Normandie is like the loss of a dozen ships.

Meanwhile the British are on the verge of losing Singapore weeks ahead of any imagined defeat in that fortress which cost $410,000,000. In Burma the Japanese are gaining strength. We keep celebrating the shooting down of an occasional Japanese plane or put headlines up when three are blasted.

The cold truth is the war is running against us. It still remains a war we can lose. We aren't tough enough.

We still are talking about getting going later. If we don't get going soon it may be too late really to win the war.

Complete Japanese control in the Pacific would mean the shutting off of supplies to China and to Russia. It would mean both those countries would be starved into submission through lack of food for themselves and the war machines.

The British debacle is a shameful one, but it does no good to weep over it. They have known it had to be held. They have spent enormous sums on it. "Maginot line" thinking and the type congressmen we have, whose counterparts are in England's Chamberlain set, have ruined England.

We could help by getting tough.

It looks as if we will have to do what we didn't want to do—get really tough.

OPEN UP THE JAILS

We have let the Japanese suspects remain on the loose in California. Only those the FBI actually had the goods on were locked up.

We have got running around loose in this country the worst looking and most dangerous zoo you ever saw. It is composed of Italian Fascists and French Fascists, all of whom are parading around being entertained by our own social zoo of parasites at night clubs in New York, where the cafe society hangs out, and at Palm Beach and other spots south.

They are an utterly worthless and dangerous set and they need now to be locked up.

The burning of the Normandie was undoubtedly engineered by one of these groups. It is very easy for a French or Italian Fascist to parade around as a friend of freedom and plot the burning of the Normandie or a half-dozen other ships.

We don't have to have a hysterical hunt such as we had AFTER the last war. We have, in the FBI, the finest organization in the world. It knows every dangerous occupant of our zoo. It could, in 24 hours, lock them up.

We wouldn't have to take a man or woman on whom they didn't have the goods, or at least some goods.

Surprisingly little injustice would be done if we gathered up all the strange and awful creatures on the FBI list.

If we don't do it we will have powder plants blown up, ships burned, and production plants destroyed. The era of sabotage opened yesterday.

A PATIENT PEOPLE

We are the most patient people on earth. And slow to anger. We have been telling ourselves we didn't want to do anything unreasonable. And we need not.

We needn't do anything silly like refusing to play music written by German composers or halting the teaching of foreign languages.

We needn't do anything unjust such as dealing out harsh treatment to people who were born in other countries.

But we can be very quick to put away any alien who is suspect. We can put away any foreign-born person whose citizenship the FBI knows is not honest and productive of loyalty. We can stay strictly within the FBI list.

We can quit being saps.

A huge ship such as the Normandie can't burn because one blow torch went wrong. And even if officials knew it to be sabotage they couldn't say so. Not now.

The war is going to swing around to a point where we have got to win it or lose it. The British, once they are out of Singapore, will be of less and less help.

The Russian strength will fall off with the loss of Singapore and Burma. So will that of China.

The war will have to be won or lost in the United States. And don't forget for a moment it is a war that can be lost.

It's time we got tough and woke up to that fact.

A long war in which all nations emerged exhausted and without victory might come out of many more setbacks. And that sort of ending would be a defeat.

The Generals Needed Most Are Those Trained To Manage Machines and Workers

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

There are two simple rules that determine the success of every great project attempted by man.

First, it must be in charge of a strong, competent and resourceful man who knows how to do everything that needs doing.

Second, the man in charge must have the power to give orders and get obedience, and this means money power or political power.

(Knowing "how to do everything that needs doing" includes having the intelligence to pick top-notch lieutenants and delegate to them all the power they need.)

The Pyramids were built by political power. The Pharaohs had power to commandeer materials and force men to work without compensation.

The clearing up of the Burma Road mess was also a political job. Three Americans studied the operation of the road and suggested remedies for everything that was wrong, but it was the political power of Chiang that applied the remedies. Workers obeyed orders—or else.

So in Russia, Germany and Japan, it was political power that built great military machines and geared all industry to the business of war.

But in our free land, all great things have been achieved by the power of money. Whether the job was the building of a railroad, a steel mill or a power dam, the man in charge was able to enlist the necessary brains and skill because he had the money to pay for what he needed. Money hired competent helpers, and they did their part willingly.

In England, successful men retire and serve their country for the honor of it. In America, where money-making is the chief interest and the measure of ability, our ablest and keenest and most enterprising men have always served business and industry.

Thus it is that nearly all of our trained and capable executives are businessmen—not politicians. And though the vast business of preparing for war requires political power as well as money power, only businessmen have the training and the executive skill to direct it.

Being an executive is a trade, like being a general, and our most dangerous shortage is that of skilled managers. Trusting politicians to do the job will be as disastrous as trusting a cornfield lawyer to direct the Army.

OFF THE RECORD—By Ed Reed

"I'm terribly sorry too, sir—but mail service to Tokyo has been suspended!"

Dudley Glass

Agricultural Department, backed by several enthusiastic newspaper editors, suggests it would be a good thing if everybody who owns or has possession of a bit of land start a garden, for food supply.

I make haste to applaud that. I endorse it heartily. As I applaud the boys who fly and drive tanks. But not for me, please.

Some 18 years ago the Mistress of the Manor acquired an equity in a suburban home with an acre of ground attached and started in farming. On a big scale. Tomatoes and radishes and onions. And maybe wheat and coconuts and corn beef and cabbage. I've tried to forget.

I was never a farmer at heart and that first summer eliminated any faint desire to retire from my job and go into agriculture. My back hasn't straightened out after all these years.

There was only one season of gardening for food. After that she went in for flowers, at which she proved quite successful. It seems a rose, though it acquires a tomato, is not as susceptible as a tomato.

Still, I urge all my friends and neighbors to go to the vegetable patch, planting and hoeing and spraying—and I hope—harvesting. They may raise enough about their needs to slip a basketful on our back porch some morning when we're not looking.

War Victim

Edwin Callaway, editor of the Thomsonville Press, is one of Georgia's war casualties.

Because he's an accommodating soul and a friend of all the girls in the Red Cross first aid class. So he has played dummy, or manikin, to classes in bandaging and whatnot. Mostly Mrs. Callaway's subject. But let him tell his own story.

"After today we rest. For weeks we've been undergoing the strain of a Red Cross first aid course, but the final examination is to be given this afternoon, and we will earn a deserved vacation from splints, bandages and artificial shock. We won't even have to cravat bandages, and digital pressure. From now on we can let our mind forget such things as abrasions, internal bleeding and second-degree burns.

"Once the final examination is over, and passed, we can go home at night without worrying over the difference between a fainting spell and shock. We won't even have to think of minor abrasions nor multiple lacerations. The course will be over. The pressure will be off. "It's not that we've attended the course, for we haven't. We haven't studied first aid since we were a tenderfoot going on second class. First aid course has arisen from the fact that we've been a hypothetical victim ever since it began. We've suffered, from snake bite, fracture of the nose, heart failure, and epileptic fits. We've had abrasions, contusions and lacerations.

Gardens for War? Sure, Go Ahead; I'll Stand By

We've undergone the agonies of drowning, sun stroke, and acute alcoholism. We've had a compound fracture of the leg, a punctured lung, and splintered back. In fact, there's nothing that we haven't had during the past few weeks in order to advance the cause of first aid.

"You see, while we haven't been taking the course, the other half of our domestic firm has, and she's practiced on us. It seems that it does no good just to look at pictures of triangular bandages. You must practice on somebody. And that's where we come in. "For the past two weeks we've led a hectic life. Just let us come in from the office, all primed for dinner, and this is what we hear: "Gee, I'm glad to see you. I've been wanting to practice an open head bandage all the morning. Please sit down and let me tie this bandage around your head."

Hot Stuff

Because I inquired, in some comment on turnip greens, what had become of the grand old pepper sauce, a reader—J. Elmer Nall, of Grantville, Ga.—sent me a bottle full of peppers.

Unfortunately, his peppers arrived before his letter. The label was deceptive. It said "sweet pickles," and I didn't know Mrs. Nall, who made them herself, had used a sweet pickle bottle for shipping.

Buck Bottom and other members of the sports department, whose elbows rub against mine, can testify to the difference between sweet and hot—in music and pickles. I passed them around, generously, and never before has the office resounded with such cries for ice water.

But I rescued most of them—and took them home. I know they'll go mightily well with the next batch of turnip greens.

Hot stuff, baby!

Next to "contacted" as a verb—which probably will be okayed by the next dictionary—my pet aversion is "very unique."

My dictionary has been borrowed, but my impression is that "unique" means only one of its kind. It can't be more or less unique. It is or it isn't.

Also, while I'm delivering a lecture on English, of which I am abysmally ignorant, I don't like "most perfect." Perfect is perfect and you can't add anything to that. "Most nearly perfect" would be more nearly perfect English.

British Put Limit On Captives' Food

LONDON, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Enemy prisoners of war—except those in working parties—were limited to the food quantities allowed British troops employed on sedentary duties under new ration regulations which became effective today.

Working parties will continue to receive the normal home service ration scale, but it will be modified to meet the tastes of the nationals concerned.

Prisoners not in working parties will be allowed 2-4 1/2 ounces of meat daily, 6-7 of an ounce of margarine, 4-7 of an ounce of bacon, 2-7 of an ounce of sugar, 32 ounces of potatoes and 5 1/2 ounces of fresh vegetables.

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

HORSES AND MULES.

Have you been around your nearest livery stable or stockyard lately? You're not treating yourself right if you miss it. There's something going on in this country that ought to make us all break right in to singing the Doxology. I refer to the fact that horses and mules are coming back to their rightful places in our national economy.

This country owes more to horses and mules than we have lately been willing to admit. All the loose talk that went the rounds here in the wild days of the "abundant life," when fun was poked at our fathers and mothers for having lived in "the horse-and-buggy era" was not only loose talk, but dangerous talk. I am happy to believe that this generation is through with that philosophy of life—getting something for nothing, forever demanding fewer and fewer hours of work and greater and greater pay—when a high-ranking executive was drawing hundreds of thousands of dollars of salary which they were "blowing in" on summer yachts and winter palaces and divorces and divorces—when working men were fooled into believing that they could trust racketeers to force wages beyond a reasonable level in the equation of supply and demand—when everybody was so sure of himself that he would throw the Ten Commandments into the garbage can, and eat, drink, and be merry. Those Santa Claus days are gone, let us hope; and we are now back to the place where we will look for the old gentleman only on Christmas Eve, with the clear understanding that we must do our part to keep him and his reindeer flying.

Yessir, the horse and the mule are back with us. I saw a picture in last Sunday's Constitution of Mr. Couch holding four horses that had just been purchased for some milk concern in Atlanta that would adorn any gallery in the land. And a day or two before I saw the picture of the four horses, I saw a picture of three mules in one of the Atlanta papers. I can't recall which, that did my soul good.

The government has got to have a lot of these mules. Mules are better fighters than horses. They have more sense, and that is not to discount the horse. I love them both.

And we've got to have lots of horses and mules to keep the home fires burning. I see big truck loads of them headed for the farms of Georgia. That is good. Only I wish our farmers here in Georgia would raise their own horses and mules, which many are beginning now to do, encouraged by their wide-awake, progressive neighbors and the state colleges of agriculture. Our fathers did it, and we can do it. We are on our way out of this mess when we get back to the essential part which horses and mules must have in a sustained program of the American way of life.

"TOO LITTLE, TOO LATE" MAY BE SAID OF ATLANTA

Editor, Constitution: Is Atlanta, too, to do "too little too late?" If I were mayor I would rather have spent $20,000 for air raid signals we never needed than to have gone through a "Coventry" with no adequate alarm available to warn the public.

If the mayor is waiting for crystallization of public opinion, he already has it in the rapidly growing Civilian Defense organization. Over 10,000 are already actively enrolled and taking air raid warden instructions. Additional thousands are enrolling in other phases of the work until air raid warden and first aid classes are forming so rapidly that we have difficulty in finding sufficient instructors, and even classrooms to accommodate us.

Our whole Civilian Defense organization becomes a tragic play-thing and a "comedy of errors," if it has no suitable alarm system through which it may function. Are we wasting our time? Do we have to wait until we are bombed to learn if we need these alarms? I hope we never have to use the alarm for an actual raid, but if we never do the $20,000 would be a prime investment in giving us a feeling of readiness for any emergency. That in itself is worthwhile in times like these. If we do need to use them we will all thank God we spent the money in time.

The Army leaders of the Fourth Corps Area say that bombings are not only possible but even probable. We could just as easily have been bombed yesterday as after the mass meeting to be held next Friday. Even so, we need another 30 days of grace before the alarm can be installed, if purchased.

At Pearl Harbor there were two—one in the Army, one in the Navy who did not believe it would happen there. Is Atlanta to be another Pearl Harbor?

Naval Enlisted Men Get 'Break' Under New Bill

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Described by Chairman Vinson, Democrat, Georgia, of the Naval Committee, as designed to make the Navy "for the first time democratic," legislation making it easier for an enlisted man to obtain a naval commission was passed today by the house and sent to the senate.

It grants more leeway to warrant officers and enlisted men to advance in the Navy's line by removing a restriction permitting only 12 warrant officers annually to receive line commissions. Eventually, Vinson told the house, the bill will result in elimination of the present practice of giving virtually all naval commissions to Annapolis graduates.

WHERE SINGAPORE BATTLE RAGES—The diagonal area indicates the section of Singapore island where the British were fighting yesterday to check invading Japanese forces. The Nipponese began their offensive on a 10-mile front extending from Pasir Laba to the Kranji river. Later Tokyo claimed to have taken Tengah airport and assaulted British north shore positions near the great naval base and the destroyed Johore-Singapore causeway.

darkness of the mangrove swamps.

One Area of Crisis.

In the whole Pacific, Singapore thus was the one area of crisis. Its fall, while in no sense imminent, appeared entirely possible, and with it a tremendous loss in the Allied position.

On Luzon, the War Department's morning communiqué reported, General Douglas MacArthur's infantry and artillery again scored heartening victories.

A number of concealed enemy batteries which had been bombarding the American Manila bay fortifications were smashed by American fire, and in heavy infantry fighting on Bataan peninsula all enemy assaults were thrown back. Again it appeared MacArthur had delayed the enemy's anticipated grand attack.

On the Burma front the British command reported no change on the Salween river front and it appeared the Japanese had been definitely stalled there, 100 miles short of their major objective at Rangoon, the head of the Burma supply road to China, by British troops and Chinese and Indian reinforcements.

101 Planes Down.

All the available information, in fact, supported a cautious Allied optimism as to the Burmese theater, and the day brought well confirmation that the score of Japanese raiding planes shot down over Rangoon by American volunteer fliers had reached 101.

In the Dutch East Indies the principal development was a Japanese air raid upon Batavia, the capital of the key island of Java, in which damage to grounded Dutch aircraft was acknowledged. The defense, however, appeared to have been effective, for at least one and possibly two of the six raiding fighters were shot down.

As to land fighting, the Dutch conceded Japanese troops beating southward from occupied Balikpapan in eastern Borneo were "apparently planning to reach Sandakan," which, if occupied, could serve as a strong base for the expected eventual all-out attempt to invade Java itself.

Russians Gain At Both Ends of Lengthy Front

Nazi Forces Flounder Back in Disordered Retreat.

By EDDIE GILMORE.

MOSCOW, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Aided by American-made planes, the Russians hurled the Germans back for new and smashing gains on both ends of the 1,500-mile front today and Soviet authorities announced the capture of "one village after another" from German forces floundering westward in disordered retreat.

Slashing through vast, hastily laid German mines, Red forces made their most important gains in the Donets basin where the German withdrawal appeared to be taking on the appearance of a rout.

Farther to the south, Soviet commanders announced massive blows against the Nazi besiegers of the big Crimean naval base of Sevastopol.

In the north, the Russians announced in the past few days the Red army surge had liberated more than 30 villages, annihilated two battalions of German infantry, wiped out a big headquarters and captured important enemy staff documents.

In this area the Germans were falling back rapidly, fighting stubborn rearguard actions.

(In still another smashing Soviet success, Stockholm reported Red forces had occupied the eastern suburbs of Rzhnev, northern anchor of the Germans' shattered Moscow front. Rzhnev, 80 miles south-west of Kalinin and 130 miles northwest of Moscow, has been virtually encircled for days.)

Russian sappers paved the way for the Donets basin advance, clearing five lanes through one mine field two miles long and extracting 2,600 antitank mines at another point on the snow-crusted steppes.

A supreme German effort to halt the Russian offensive along the whole front from Leningrad to the Black Sea, even at the risk of encirclement of large forces in strongly fortified points, was indicated as Hitler rushed air-borne reinforcements to the northern front and savagely counterattacked at many points.

MURDER OF THREE Probed by Police

The murder of two Negroes, including a 90-year-old woman, and the mysterious death of a third were revealed yesterday in police reports.

The victims were Caroline Devine, 90, of a Mitchell street address, who was stabbed through the heart by an unidentified assailant; Maxie Moore, 45, found shot to death at an Ashby Grove address, and J. T. Johnson, 35, of an Emmett street address, who was found shot in the head, a revolver nearby.

Police reports said the Devine woman was killed when she intervened during a scuffle between three other Negroes. The Moore woman was shot by an unidentified man, according to police.

NYA Leader Praises Youth For War Work

Says Shops Are Training 25,000 Each Month.

American youth is serious about this war business. They know they have a job to do in production lines and on battlefields, and they're pitching in for the duration.

That's the opinion of a man who sees thousands of them go through the mill every month—J. J. Mulholland, former Atlanta, now head of all the shops of the National Youth Administration in America.

"Our young people from Georgia and the south are just as good as any of them," he said. "This section of the country is supplying thousands of youths to the shipbuilding industry particularly, and almost as many to aircraft production."

Mulholland was in Atlanta yesterday for conferences with NYA shop supervisors from 11 southeastern states.

"We had to get toiled up for this job, just as private industry did when the war program broke upon them," Mulholland said. "But the shops went up in a hurry, and we are currently sending out about 25,000 young people a month from our defense shops into jobs in war industries, and about 11,000 a month more from shops on our so-called regular program."

Uncertain Destiny

Linda Becomes Hysterical After Scene With Brenda

INSTALLMENT LXV.

"I understand you're free now," Linda went on desperately. "Will you resume your maiden name?"

Brenda smiled faintly. "Temporarily," she said.

Linda winced, knowing what Brenda wanted her to believe. Had it been that obvious, she wondered? Then Brenda began speaking rapidly. Gone was the well-modulated voice, the expression of innocence. Instead, Brenda was completely herself—coarse, ugly.

"I said I'd been expecting you," she said, "and I know why you've come. You never fooled me—not from the first, sister. Just look at you, so sweet and innocent—Steve's little helpmate. What a laugh! Where has it gotten you? Greg wouldn't have you if it hadn't been that Steve struck it rich."

"It didn't take long for you to get wise to which side your bread was buttered on. You found out all you had to do was get a fat share of Steve's money and you could have anything you wanted—even Greg Hollister, if you call that a prize."

"That isn't true!" Linda was on her feet, her face red with anger. "You know it isn't true, even when you're trying desperately to have everyone believe I'm like that—like you." Never had Linda expected to make so vituperative an attack. She raged on:

"I won't listen to you any longer, but I want you to know that I don't want Greg Hollister, and I don't want Steve's money either—not a penny of it!"

"Of course you don't," Brenda laughed shortly, relaxing against her satin pillows. She seemed to be enjoying the scene immensely. Linda's suffering seemed to make Brenda happier.

"Linda, you're as transparent as glass. Why Steve doesn't see through this front you're putting up is beyond me. You marched yourself up here as the spirit of injured womanhood, to ask what my intentions are toward Steve, because you've discovered, after it was too late, that you were mad in love with him. It's written all over you.

"Well," Brenda snapped, "all I can say is that it's none of your business now what happens to Steve. You had your chance and missed it. What I choose to do is my own concern, and I'll thank you to keep out of my way."

"I'm still Steve's wife," Linda said, but all defiance had left her. She looked tired and bewildered. "What if I should go and tell him the truth?"

Brenda laughed mockingly. "Which of us do you think he would believe?" she queried. "The woman who is leaving him for another man, or the woman he loves?"

Linda's final hope died as she realized the significance of Brenda's statement. From the beginning, Brenda had held the winning card—Steve's love. Even he had admitted readily that he had loved Brenda since his earliest college days. He had declared he could never love anyone else.

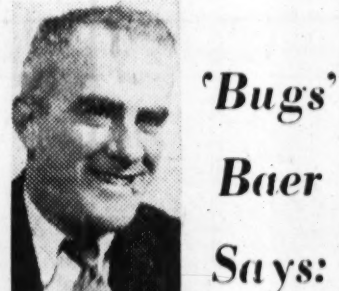

Now that she was free, it was only natural that Brenda should reclaim Steve. The girl was entirely without scruples. She was wealthy now, established in Chicago's most exclusive circles. She would not hesitate to ruin another man's life by lying about Linda if she thought it necessary to suit her own whim.

Linda shrugged in despair. Further argument would be futile. Linda started for the door. Then she paused.

"I hope—" There were tears in her eyes; Brenda was only dimly visible. "I hope you two will be very—very—happy." Suppressing a sob, Linda fled from the bedroom.

In her present state of mind, near hysteria after her scene with Brenda, the fearful Linda could not bear the thought of returning to the lonely, forsaken apartment.

In cold despair, she hailed a cab.

'Bugs' Baer Says:

There seems to be some inclination to fix the blame in those December surprise attacks and we have blamed everybody but the Japs.

Back in 1922 after the London naval conference I threw a strike with the crystal ball by predicting just what happened.

And I also wrote a line that is still good today, "You have buttered your toast and you must lie on it."

The truth about December is that it can and has happened to people who were ready for it.

The best example is the Bismarck, the most powerful thing afloat except the smell in the ark on a rainy day.

And the Bismarck sure made some fine bubbles without using soap and a pipe.

and gave Diane's studio address. Huddled in a corner, Linda tried to repair the damage tears had wrought, but her efforts were unsuccessful. Her one thought was to reach Diane and pour out the entire story, to be comforted and understood, to find forgetfulness. The artist was hard at work on a sketch, but seeing the expression on Linda's face as she stumbled into the tiny studio, Diane rose quickly and put her arms around the girl's shaking shoulders.

"What is it?" she asked anxiously. "You're white as a ghost, Linda. Aren't you feeling well?" "Feeling well?" Linda laughed hollowly. "I never felt better in my life! Why shouldn't I feel wonderful? I have everything anyone could want!" Laughter bubbled up in her throat. Tears streamed unheeded down her cheeks. In vain Diane tried to quiet her. This was the maddening, frightening laughter of the hysterical, and Linda continued to laugh and cry alternately, until Diane, her face desperate with anxiety, raised her hand and struck the girl hard across both cheeks.

Linda's laughter stopped. Weakly she groped her way to a chair and stared accusingly at Diane with tear-wet amber eyes. "You slapped me," she whispered hoarsely, her hand touching a reddening cheek.

"I'm sorry," Diane said anxiously. "You were hysterical. I was afraid—"

Suddenly Linda buried her face in her hands, and sobbed.

"Diane, do you hate me very much?"

"Why should I?" Diane was taken back by Linda's sorrow.

"But I've been such a trial to you, Diane. I've been thoughtless to everyone—Mother and Dad, Kyle, and now I'm ruining your life—letting Greg fall in love with me, leading him on, when all the time—" Linda stopped. Would it be wise to tell Diane that Greg occupied only a small place in her schemes to release Steve from his unhappy marriage?

Diane had apparently not noticed Linda's hesitancy. Gently, she said, "Nothing Greg does means anything to me anymore. I haven't seen him for weeks. It ended when he came back from South America and I saw him as he really was."

How familiar that was to Linda, for she had experienced the same emotion. Yet, was it the same? She had realized it was Steve she loved, but Diane had always loved Greg.

Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Astrologist.

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21 and April 19 (ARIES)—The influences operating today are such that may suddenly break up some existing condition in your life. You may have to guard against a dogged determination to go ahead no matter what the outcome. Therefore, the day is not especially auspicious for changes or radical departure from routine.

April 20 and May 20 (TAURUS)—Be careful that you do not miscalculate or misjudge or overdo in financial transactions previous to 10:42 a. m. but if you will give your attention to affairs of a light vein, or which involve your domestic and social happiness, this can be a very favorable period.

May 21 and June 20 (GEMINI)—Before 10:37 a. m. favors general business dealings, and dealings with those in high positions, or who are at the head of affairs.

June 21 and July 22 (CANCER)—Before 1:15 p. m. favors general business dealings, and dealings with those in high positions, or who are at the head of affairs.

July 23 and August 22 (LEO)—The entire day and until 7:53 p. m. favors mechanical and industrial works, finances, educational and legal affairs, but suggests caution in works around liquids, chemicals and drugs.

August 23 and September 22 (VIRGO)—The entire day and until 8:40 p. m. favors business and financial matters. About 8:40 p. m. it would be well to pay attention to detail to avoid misunderstanding or deception.

September 23 and October 22 (LIBRA)—Previous to 1:15 p. m. favors contacting influential people. Between 1:15 p. m. and 4:25 p. m. favors attending to old matters. The remainder of the day does not favor new plans. Stick to routine.

October 23 and November 21 (SCORPIO)—Previous to 12:07 noon, you should be able to accomplish your desires with unexpected ease. The entire day favors general business.

November 22 and December 21 (SAGITTARIUS)—The entire period previous to 1:43 p. m. favors buying and selling, trading, contracts and communications. After 1:43 p. m. favors pleasures, domestic affairs and travel.

December 22 and January 19 (CAPRICORN)—The entire day favors practically all lines of endeavor. Be active and energetic in promoting all matters. The afternoon hours are more favorable than previous to 1:27 p. m.

January 20 and February 18 (AQUARIUS)—This should be a very favorable day for ideas that start and finish now. Optimism or over-exuberance for the future should be curbed, and if these traits are held in reserve, the day favors domestic, financial affairs, sociability and mechanical interests.

February 19 and March 20 (PISCES)—The entire day does not especially favor new beginnings. Handle electric equipment and motor vehicles especially carefully today. The day does not especially favor signing papers, and use caution in dealings with relatives.

Graydon Given New Duties in Defense Setup

General Peyton Placed In Complete Command of Activities.

Brigadier General E. G. Peyton yesterday designated Stafford W. Graydon, resigned director of civilian protection, as director of civilian defense schools. It was Peyton's first official act after he was officially notified by Mayor LeCraw that the Municipal Defense Council has bestowed him with complete authority in organizing local civilian defense activities.

When Graydon resigned Friday, he said General Peyton should be given absolute authority in administration of the civilian defense effort. He said he would serve in any capacity to which General Peyton named him.

The mayor formally notified Peyton of the defense council's action taken after Graydon's plea, and a special order was issued to all defense recruits.

At the same time, LeCraw asked the First Interceptor Command to authorize Atlanta to stage a practice blackout within the next few days solely for testing the city's present available air raid warning equipment and the air warden setup. He had not heard from his message last night.

The mayor also received a message from Paul Betters, executive director of the United States Conference of Mayors, advising "the Office of Civilian Defense has never requested any city such as Atlanta to expend substantial sums for air raid warning facilities."

A warning system costing approximately $8,000 has been proposed. The mayor's object in asking the practice is to determine just how effective present facilities are.

Walter S. McNeal Jr., vice chairman of the Fulton county zoning and planning commission, backed LeCraw's stand in proceeding slowly in any large outlays for air raid signal equipment.

Under the present available system, alarms in Atlanta would be sounded by sirens on fire trucks, railroad and industrial plant whistles.

Leaders Call All-Day Parley Of Methodists

4 Meetings To Be Held Here, in Marietta Monday.

By DR. THOMAS M. ELLIOTT.

An all-day meeting for Methodist laymen and workers in women's societies is announced for Monday by Dr. E. G. Mackay and Dr. Wallace Rogers, superintendents of the two Atlanta districts, and by Mrs. R. H. McDougal and Mrs. T. J. Hamby, district secretaries for women's work.

Ministers and laymen of Methodist churches north of the Chattahoochee river will meet at 2 o'clock Monday at the Marietta First Methodist church. Women will meet at 11 o'clock Monday morning at Marietta First church.

Ministers and laymen of all churches south of the Chattahoochee river will meet at 10 o'clock at Trinity church, Atlanta. Women from churches in the southern section will meet at 1 o'clock at Trinity.

The same program and the same speakers are announced for both sectional meetings. Miss Ruth Esther Wheaton, of New York, is to address all four gatherings in connection with young people's work. Local workers include Dr. E. N. Boyles, Mrs. Hamby, Mrs. McDougal, the Rev. John Tate, the Rev. J. C. Callaway, the Rev. W. S. Norton, the Rev. H. C. Holland, Dr. R. L. Russell, Dr. Mackay, Dr. Rogers and the Rev. Irby Henderson.

Registration Started for Enemy Aliens

20 of 399 in Atlanta Area Report on First Day.

Shielded by a high, solid wooden screen, which made a separate compartment of the northwest lobby of the Old Post Office building, Atlanta's enemy aliens began registering yesterday for identification as required by Department of Justice regulations.

Postmaster Lon Livingston, under whose jurisdiction the poll is being conducted for the Justice Department, said the first day's figure was 20. There are 399 enemy aliens in the Atlanta region and 701 in Georgia.

The registration, mandatory upon all nationals of Germany, Italy and Japan, 14 years of age or older, will continue through this month. Each must bring his previous alien registration card and three front view facial photographs, two inches by two inches.

A fingerprint operator, Walter H. Templeman, who took part in the 1940 registration here, was appointed by Livingston to conduct actual proceedings.

At the City Hall

Representatives of Robert & Company, Atlanta engineering firm, will appear at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon before the city planning commission to outline a projected post-war improvement program for the metropolitan area.

Mrs. Wallace Wright, London air-raid warden, will address the Second Ward Alliance at 8 o'clock tonight on how to combat air raids. C. H. Van Ormer, president and civilian director of the sixth Atlanta defense district, announced yesterday.

Howard Haire Jr., son of Councilman and Mrs. Howard Haire, is thriving on Air Corps discipline at Maxwell Field, Alabama, his father reported yesterday after a visit to the field. "He's gained 10 pounds and is looking more like me," Haire said.

City council's purchasing committee yesterday ordered a new automobile for Fire Chief Styron over Mayor LeCraw's protest. The mayor contended a lighter car than the one ordered would be preferable, but committee members held upkeep would be less on a larger and heavier machine. The General Elevator Company, headed by Mike Benton, was awarded the city elevator maintenance contract. The aggregate is about $4,000 for the period.

Williams Appeals To U. S. Court

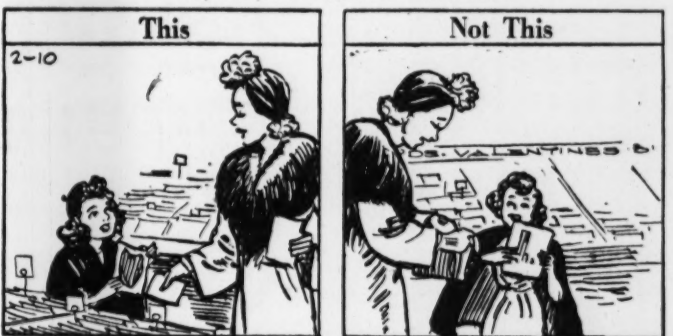

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Norman Williams, Gwinnett county, Georgia, under sentence of death for the murder of Lon Fortson, appealed to the supreme court today from a decision denying him a writ of habeas corpus.

Convicted in 1937, Williams several times has been granted a reprieve. Justice Black last month granted a stay of execution pending action by the high court on his appeal from the Georgia supreme court.

Williams was convicted in the Elbert county superior court. He contended he was denied due process of law under the 14th amendment to the Constitution, because he was without "effective" representation by counsel appointed by the court.

LECTURES—Dr. Fay-Cooper Cole, head anthropologist of the University of Chicago, lectured at Agnes Scott last night on the difference in "races."

AryanBallyhoo Is Deflated by Anthropologist

'There's No Such Thing,' Dr. Fay-Cooper Cole, Lecturer Says.

By DUDLEY GLASS.
"There's no such thing as a Herr Hitler's much-talked-about Aryan race. To the scientist an Aryan means any person whose natural language is an Indo-European language.
"Neither is there a Jewish race, because the Jews came from several racial and widely different groups. But the Jews are not Aryan—they come from Semitic speaking peoples."
Dr. Fay-Cooper Cole, here for a lecture last night at Agnes Scott College, was talking to an interviewer in the Union Station, after his arrival from Chicago.
Dr. Cole is an anthropologist. Anthropology is defined as the science of physical man, his origin, his development, his history. An anthropologist can pick up a fragment of human skull and tell you how long the deceased has been deceased, whether he was Indian or Italian, and probably how he got where his bones were found.
Dr. Cole is head of the department of anthropology at the University of Chicago. Young in appearance and vigorous of step, he has traveled the world over studying mankind. Not live specimens. Dead ones. Long dead.
Dr. Cole didn't care to discuss the war situation, which is not his field. The theme of his lecture was: "An Anthropologist's View of Race."
"I hope to clear up numerous misunderstandings about that word," he said. "There's no such thing, for instance as a French race. There are not many races. But there are numerous subdivisions. Race, to a scientist, is a purely biological term.
"Anthropology isn't such a tough study. You can take any group of average young students, give them access to good museums, and within three weeks any one of them can examine a skeleton and tell its race, age and sex—with about 85 per cent success."

Forbes Expecting Rationing Orders

Regulations for the rationing of new cars and sugar are expected to be received by T. M. Forbes, state rationing director, within the next few days, he said yesterday.
Two hundred and fifty thousand forms for applications for new tires and tubes have been received by him, but as yet nothing has come for cars and sugar.
"Beginning February 12 we will release new cars which were bought on a bona fide contract prior to January 1, when proof of the purchase is made," Forbes said.
"Rationing of new cars is to begin February 26, but we have not been told under what conditions persons can buy them nor details as to who will be eligible to buy them."

Humane Society Out of White Rats

Notice to the public! The Atlanta Humane Society is out of white rats.
S. E. Hollis, manager of the society's shelter at 980 Howell Mill road, asked The Constitution Saturday to help him dispose of 40 white rats a woman with an anti-rat complex had left there, and a story appeared in Sunday's paper.
Before mid-afternoon Sunday, all 40 rats had been given away—to men and boys and families with children and even to one lone woman who wanted a rat for company. "We could have found homes for twice as many if we'd had them," Mrs. S. E. Hollis said yesterday.

NLRB Director Takes Army Post

Robert Frazer, regional director of the NLRB since last June, will leave Monday to embark for an unannounced foreign post as an Army intelligence officer. He will be succeeded here by Oscar Smith, now assistant director of the field division of the NLRB in Washington.
The departing official, standing 6 feet 4 inches tall, is 35 years old and for years was an associate of Senator Lister Hill, of Alabama.

Making a Soldier of Sugar

AS we have sent men abroad to fight for America—as we have sent money—as we have drafted steel, with other commodities, into fighting-service or enlisted wheat and other fighting-foods—so we must make a soldier of sugar.

Nutrient for the nations at war is as vital to the outcome as the powder that feeds the guns. A great nutrient in time of peace—in war a veritable sinew—sugar is now called upon to play a heroic part, to supply the peoples of our Allies—whose strength is ours.

To wrap up sugar in the American flag, so to speak, and put it into the fight becomes a duty of loyalty. It will be borne cheerfully by every industry, every dealer, and every individual it falls upon. Upon certain industries it falls heavily—and especially on the workers who derive their living from them. Yet the American civilian is in this war with the soldier. American business great and small, American capital from Wall Street to the remotest country bank, is with the Government every step of the way. The U. S. means Us. We, all, are in the fight with everything we have, for the sake of everything we cherish.

The company regards it a privilege to comply with the government's request, and similarly to all manufacturers, to produce sugar.

To the end of conservation we pledge our further efforts in every direction that opportunity may disclose, in manufacture as well as beyond the scope of our immediate interests; and in this effort generally we bespeak the co-operation of dealers and consumers everywhere.

ATLANTA, GA.

WORLD WAR I 1917

The United States Government restricted the use of sugar in World War I. The response of The Coca-Cola Company was expressed in the newspaper advertisement reproduced at the left.

Again, Sugar enlists for Victory

WORLD WAR II 1942

History repeats itself in World War II. Sugar has been called to war again. Our government has restricted the use of sugar for all. Naturally, that includes Coca-Cola.

You'll continue to find Coca-Cola around the corner from anywhere, though we regret that you won't be able to enjoy the pause that refreshes as often as you might like. Our volume has been reduced. But this we pledge: the character of Coca-Cola will be unimpaired. The American people can continue to trust its quality.

As in 1917, we count upon the patience of dealers and consumers everywhere. Conserving sugar is another step toward Victory. Whatever any of us may have, or may not have, Victory we must have above all else!

Newsboys Contribute MY DAY: To Stamp Sales

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Sunday.—Our day in Arthurdale, W. Va., on Friday was really very satisfactory. Our object was to be there for the giving on contracts to the people who qualified to purchase their houses and land.

We arrived in time for lunch, and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau Jr., who was there all morning, had time to go over to Scott's Run to see the community house there. She was delighted to find that the young couple directing the work now have a very busy little lending library, a well-furnished kitchen used by all groups, and a charming apartment which serves as a model for all the people up and down the Run.

They have worked so hard and been so earnest in their desire to help in that region, I am delighted to have this good report on what they are doing.

In the afternoon, we visited the NYA project, where boys were studying radio work, welding, sheetmetal work and woodworking. We saw their infirmary and the community building, which they have done over for their own use as well as that of the community. The boys come from all parts of West Virginia and are a fine group of youngsters.

Some of them have already gone to work in one of the factories at Scott's Run which makes radio cabinets. It seems to be flourishing and Mr. Kahn is proud of his achievements.

The inn is very attractive and I always enjoy my stay there. We had a very good dinner after the advisory committee meeting in the late afternoon, and then went over to the ceremonies. Congressman Jennings Randolph, Mr. Clarence Pickett and I, who have all been interested in the project since the beginning, said a few words of congratulation before handing out the contracts with our good wishes to the couples who were able to come up and get them. Some men are now working on the night shift and could not be there.

In one case, the son in the family had to come for the contract, because his mother was in the hospital and his father was at work. War work has brought larger incomes to many people on the project, but last year their gardens were better than ever before and we hope they will continue to take an interest in improving their land.

We took the night train back to Washington. Yesterday I shook hands with a large group of high school students before going to the Office of Civilian Defense for the rest of the morning. At lunch I had a number of young newsboys, who had come to Washington to receive their awards from the Treasury Department for having sold a large number of defense savings stamps.

Plain Soapy Water Rates High As an Effective Antiseptic

By Dr. William Brady.

Some time ago the importance of requiring proper disinfection or sterilization of dishes in restaurants, spoons, glasses and other utensils used in serving beverages or ice cream in bars, drug stores, lunch rooms and the like was urged in this column. Tests made in a Canadian town were cited as the basis for the recommendation that ordinances should require the disinfection or sterilization of such utensils with chlorine solution—100 parts of chlorine per million of water—as a minimum precaution against the spread of Vincent's angina (trench mouth) and worse diseases by the common use of unclean eating or drinking utensils.

How to prepare a solution of 100 parts of chlorine to the million parts of water would be a problem ordinarily, but not at our house. To prepare such a solution I'd go to the kitchen or laundry, fill a 10-quart pail or other vessel with water from the tap, and mix in it a tablespoonful of whichever one of the several laundry or kitchen cleanser-bleacher-disinfectants we happen to be using there. You know, the liquid you put in the washing to whiten, or bleach the clothes. In my opinion this is as efficient for disinfecting dishes, glasses, etc., as any other preparation. It is handy and cheap, too. It is about two-thirds the chlorine strength of the official solution of sodium hypochlorite generally used by laboratories and by physicians for disinfecting utensils, thermometers, etc.

So far as disinfection goes, in everyday home life, plain soap and water, hot water, is still the best bet. Personally, I would as lief depend on simple soap and water washing of an ordinary cut or abrasion, as on the application of any other first aid disinfectant. And for a cut or other wound showing signs of infection, inflammation, irritation or redness and swelling, I'd be content to give it a soaking of half an hour or more in hot soapy water and then apply a voluminous gauze or cheesecloth dressing and keep the dressing constantly moistened with soapy water for 12 hours or more. I know of no chemical antiseptic or disinfectant, ancient or modern, I'd prefer to plain soap and water. By plain soap I mean ordinary soap, laundry or toilet soap, without any impressive additions.

Come to the question of a good antiseptic to use in mouthwash or gargle, I still go for plain soap, soapy water. Soap is a very efficient antiseptic, and it can hardly do any harm in mouth or throat—more than I can say for many antiseptics offered to the public.

If soap is repugnant—plain soap, that is—then the next best thing for ordinary household use, in mouthwash or gargle, is boric acid—solution of a teaspoonful in a pint or less of boiled water, used undiluted, many times daily. When using this, make up fresh solution every day or two—it is cheap enough.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Hot Flashes

I had been subject to almost constant headache. Had taken calcium with fair results, but not until I read in your column that vitamin D should be taken along with calcium did I realize I was not getting the full benefit of it. Then I began taking calcium and vitamin D as you suggested and have hardly had a headache since. Also I soon noticed complete absence of hot flashes. (Mrs. J. M.)

Answer—Thank you, ma'am. Women who suffer from hot flashes should send stamped, addressed envelope for pamphlet "The Menopause" and also for "The Calcium Shortage."

How a Man Introduces His Ex-Wife

Dear Dixie:

I was married to Libby for five years. During those years there was hell and happiness until finally we separated. I was miserable for awhile because I really loved her. She began going out right away, but I heard that she said she would never marry again, since I had ruined her life. I knew that was not true, because the longer I have been away, the more I have realized that she was not the type for me.

After I had been separated from Libby for a year and a half I met Janie. We were married in six months. It now happens that Libby and Janie are in the same club, Libby having just joined. She still uses my last name. The club is planning a party and Janie insists that we go. She does not know that Libby is in the club. What I want to know is this: How can I introduce my new wife to my old one?

Well, Harry, the best thing to do would be to find out from Janie if she would consider meeting Libby. After all, it is Janie you are married to now, and it is her happiness which you want to keep, and she is the one you should be more concerned over. If Libby seems friendly, then the only way out is to say, "Janie, this is Libby." Unless you know that an introduction would be satisfactory to both, do not consider it at all. Don't forget that you are married to Janie now, and your first concern is her happiness, and not whether Libby meets her.

WHAT TO WEAR TO A DANCE

Dear Dixie:

I have a white taffeta evening dress. Would it be alright to wear it to a high school dance Saturday? White taffeta seems so dressed up, that I am afraid that I will be over-dressed. Answer quick.

BETTY.

The white taffeta dress sounds very attractive and I think it would be very nice to wear. If the party calls for formal attire, wear the dress and think no more

Louella Puts Damper on Rumor Of an Abbott and Costello Feud

By Louella O. Parsons

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 9.—(INS) Not since poor Thelma Todd was chased all over the Marx Brothers' pictures will a blonde be so "pursued" as Virginia Bruce in "Pardon My Sarong," the next for Abbott and Costello. I hope Virginia is well and strong, for she will need to be after playing with these two, who stop at nothing to get a laugh. Virginia has just finished "Butch Minds the Baby" at Universal, her first since the arrival of the Ruben heir.

Speaking of Abbott and Costello—there have been rumors the boys are privately feuding. I doubt very much if this is true. These two belong together like ham 'n' eggs. While Lou Costello gets most of the laughs there's no better straight man in the business than Bud Abbott, and Lou knows it.

So many of John Halliday's friends have telephoned to ask if he and Eleanor are safe in Honolulu that I am glad to report John is not only safe but working hard to find entertainment for the boys stationed there, and especially for those who are hospitalized since the Pearl Harbor attack. There are no actors in Honolulu, so John has gathered a group of amateurs to give plays and radio shows in the daytime (radio is not permitted at night).

John Farrow is recuperating so rapidly under Maureen O'Sullivan's devoted care that he feels well enough to accept Para's offer to direct "Wake Island"—and this is good news for all Johnny's friends. He was so thin and looked so ill when he returned from Canada, where he served with the Canadian Navy for two years, but he's put on 10 pounds—and what a difference in his appearance. The "Wake Island" picture, with Robert Preston and Richard Denning, should be right up the Farrow street. A native Australian, Johnny has been on Wake Island many times and knows the locale perfectly.

Brynie Foy is very excited over the story of "The Loves of Edgar Allan Poe," which Charlie Feldman sold 20th Century-Fox. Edga Allen Poe Jr., a Baltimore attorney and direct descendant of the poet, co-authored it with Tom Reed, and there are many documents and letters which have never been made public. Charlie Feldman hung on to the story a long time, believing he would produce it himself one day, but he could never find the right actor to play Poe. Curiously enough he tried to borrow John Shepperd, but 20th Century said no, so he compromised by selling them his story for Shepperd.

First of all, register at your local volunteer office. Tell them exactly what you can do. On the basis of this information you will be assigned to a particular job.

Women with families who have no spare time on their hands nevertheless have a very important part to play in Civilian Defense, and it's the home-maker's job to make America healthier and stronger with the best possible nutrition. You can best do this through the clear understanding of the science of nutrition and its application to the three meals a day. See that each child and adult member of your family get their daily share of the protective foods—fresh fruits and vegetables, milk, eggs, cheese and whole grains or enriched breads and cereals.

All of us must buy wisely—money wisely spent is money saved, and money saved will buy bonds for national defense.

Miss Davison emphasized the importance of learning new skills. Any woman can take a course in the first aid. Learn any skill which will contribute to health or welfare of others.

Alice Faye announces that she has no intention of retiring from the screen.

wants the world to know it isn't true she's retiring after the birth of the Harris heir—or heiress. Alice has already huddled with 20th bosses about "Coney Island," her first after the arrival of the little stranger. . . . Speaking of contracts, there's nothing to the talk that George Brent is leaving Warners. George has 13 months to go on his present deal and then he'll ask for just two pictures a year. He says, "In this topsy-turvy world no one knows what will happen—or where any of us will be."

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD COLLECTED AT RANDOM: Adele Palmer, stylist at Republic Studios, and George Batcheller, head of Producers' Releasing Corporation, were married at Santa Ana last week; Mickey Rooney's mother-in-law will visit him and Mrs. R. next month; Mrs. Claude Rains has been so seriously ill they have had to postpone their trip East; if Fanny Brice and John Conti are through, they didn't act it at the Derby, where they were dining tete-a-tete; Bette Davis has her California house for sale; Eddie Fetherstone, who has just finished "The Enemy Within" at Universal, is re-enlisting in the Navy tomorrow; the Don Quixotes are adopting a baby and they leave for the East tomorrow to pick it up. He is the writer for Fibber McGee and Molly. That's all for today. See you tomorrow! But Barbara Stanwyck says: "Buy defense bonds. Save your scraps to blast the Japs."

Today's Charm Tip. It's very dull and more than slightly disillusioning to her escort or guest when a woman undertakes to instruct the waiter in critical tones what to do.

Simple Foods Are the Basis Of a Family Valentine Meal

By Sally Saver.

Though you may not be having any parties, still the family can enjoy the Valentine season by use of a few easy tricks. The simplest of foods can be given a festive touch which will delight romantically minded adults and the children. Here are ways to carry out the Valentine idea:

1. Press hot, seasoned rice, squash, spinach or any other soft vegetable into a hot buttered mold. Set the mold in hot water for a few minutes, then unmold it on a heated dish, and garnish with tiny hearts cut from a red vegetable, such as beets.

2. Bake meat, fish or chicken loaf in a heart-shaped mold.

3. Use heart-shaped cutter for biscuits, toast, pastry.

LET BABY EAT HIS MILK

Mothers find that one of the best ways to give baby all the milk he needs is to make some of it each day into tempting rennet-custards. Children love to eat them with a spoon, and thus get more of the valuable nutrition which milk supplies so generously.

You can make these eggless, non-cooked custards in a minute with "Junket" Rennet Tablets—unsweetened, add sugar and flavor to taste. The rennet enzyme makes them digest more readily than plain milk. Widely recommended by doctors for babies and children. At your grocer's and drugist's.

Older children enjoy the flavors and colors of rennet-custards made with "Junket" Rennet Powder. Easier and quicker. At grocer's.

Baby Bib—10c—Made of new Byrene Plastic fabric; covers size 12 crumb pocket. Easy to keep clean. Spill-proof. Pink or blue. Send 10c and front of "Junket" Rennet Powder or Tablet, package to "The Junket" Folks, c/o Chr. Hansen's Laboratory, Inc., Dept. 1212, Little Falls, N. Y.

First Contribution Is Made To Red Cross at Midnight

By SALLY FORTH.

THE PHONE RANG in the Ralph McGill residence on Myrtle street at 11:30 one night last week. Aroused from a deep sleep, Ralph answered a bit groggily.

A slightly familiar voice—one that he couldn't place at the moment—came over the wire.

"A noisy party's going on in my neighborhood," explained the voice, "and I promised I wouldn't call the police if they would give you $15 for the Red Cross. I told 'em you and your wife were collectors for the Red Cross." And the party hung up.

Ralph, too drowsy to give the call much thought, and attributing it instantly to some "drunk," immediately went back to sleep.

It was 12:30 when the doorbell rang sharply and again aroused the McGills. Protested out loud this time, Ralph pulled on his robe and went to the door.

Opening it cautiously, he peered into the face of a man he had never seen before.

"Here's $15 for the Red Cross," the man said. "I have to pay it to you or be arrested. I knew you'd be awake because your light is always on so late."

And with that he staggered away.

Thus was the first midnight contribution made to the Red Cross. And not until the laundryman called next day did Ralph realize that his was the voice that had made the first telephone call.

The Red Cross is training millions for defense on the home front. Give to the Red Cross War Relief campaign today.

QUARANTINE, strangely enough, played an important part in the courtship of Maybeth Carithers and Lieutenant Harry Trimble, of Athens, whose betrothal was an interesting announcement of Sunday.

For if Maybeth hadn't been forced to decline Harry's invitation to attend his graduation from West Point Military Academy last June, due to quarantine because of measles, and if she hadn't slipped out from Camp Chattahoochee at Tallulah Falls to meet him one night last summer, they might never have become engaged!

It happened like this: Since measles prevented her attending Harry's graduation, the bride-elect was doubly anxious to see him last summer when he came to Camp Chattahoochee, where she was a counselor. But, alas, due to the infantile paralysis epidemic, a quarantine was placed on the camp, and the only way she could see him was to "slip out."

She feels no regret over violation of the rules, however, for it was on that night that she and her future husband became engaged.

The popular couple kept their betrothal a secret until November, when Harry brought his fiancée an engagement ring before he reported for duty at Randolph Field, Texas. The silk jersey. Her flowers were white sweetpeas.

The bride's table, which was overlaid with an embroidered white cloth, was centered with a tiered cake embedded in ferns and white gladioli. Silver candelabra, flanked by lighted white tapers, flanked the cake. Assisting in entertaining were Mrs. W. E. Letts and Mrs. Harold Bowcock.

During the evening Mr. Whitmer and his bride departed for a wedding trip after which they will reside on Piedmont road here.

Guests from a distance who attended the wedding were Dr. and Mrs. Jonas C. Whitmer, of Oregon, Mo., the groom's parents, and Jack Sherrill, of Hattiesburg, Mississippi.

S. Chaney, united thank offering custodian, and Burt Headrich, church periodical club secretary.

Christian Home Club.

The Christian Home Club of Grace Methodist church met yesterday with Mrs. T. N. Scott for an all-day sewing for the Red Cross.

Mrs. Joe Dobbs, program chairman, announced that Wednesday Dr. Pierce Harris would speak to the group on the subject, "Use of Time Out of the Home," at the home of Mr. Ben Hatfield, 601 Page avenue, N. E., with Mrs. W. Chester Martin and Mrs. Erskine Lindsey co-hostesses.

Georgia Wins Over Florida By One Point

Bulldogs Leave S. E. C. Cellar in Close Decision at Athens.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 9.—Georgia came out of the Southeastern Conference cellar tonight and Florida dropped to the bottom as the Bulldogs took a listless, 27-to-26 decision over the Gators in the first of two contests here.

The clubs meet again tomorrow night at 8:15 o'clock, the fourth contest of the season between them. They broke even in Florida, Georgia's No. 1 point getter, Captain Bobby Moore, was unable to hit the hoops, and as a result Georgia had a tough time getting its victory. Moore noticeably favored a sore shoulder, injured in the Auburn game, and he was able to come through with only three field goals, all from far out. However, it was his basket in the last two minutes that decided the game, although at the time Georgia held a three-point advantage.

Bud Roland came through with 11 points to pace the scoring for the night. Florida's Steve Ellis was second with nine.

18 Are Named In $5,000 Race Next Saturday

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Eighteen horses have been named for the $5,000 added Evening handicap—the next-to-the-biggest race of the winter for fillies and mares—at Hialeah Park Saturday.

The Evening handicap and the $10,000 Black Helen March 2 both were named in honor of highly successful fillies, Joseph F. Widener's Evening and E. R. Bradley's Black Helen.

Every outstanding filly or mare at Hialeah is eligible for the Evening, including the stakes winners, Sweet Willow, Cis Marion, Cuts Trick, Petty Pet, Pig Tails and Incolida.

Winners of lesser events include Dark Discovery, Belle Poise, Transient, One Jest, Sister Union, Kasidah, Button Hole and Sylvestra.

Woodvale Farm's Dorimar won the Inaugural Evening handicap last year.

Simmons Predicts 4th Place for A's

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 9.—(AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics, who wound up last season a dismal eighth, will finish the coming season in fourth place if they get the breaks and "no worse than fifth no matter what happens."

That's the starry-eyed prediction of Al Simmons, "Old Bucketfoot," who is now a coach for Connie Mack.

Simmons' optimism wasn't shaken by the fact that the Athletics lost their brightest star, Outfielder Sam Chapman, and its regular second baseman, Benny McCoy, to the Army and Navy.

PERU CHAMPION.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 9.—(AP)—A. T. Jergin's Meissen, former champion of Peru, will make his first North American start tomorrow in a $1,500 seven-furlong race at Hialeah Park for older horses. In his only 19 trials, Meissen won 15 times—including a dead heat—finished second twice and third twice.

All in The Game
BY JACK TROY

To Be Or . . . Whatever else the fateful year 1942 develops, there will be an answer to one absorbing question in the Southern league. We'll know by the end of summer whether Memphis is a baseball town or just a Bluff City, as the Chamber of Commerce advertises.

Each passing year has brought a new alibi as to why fans stay away from Russwood park by the tens of thousands. Sly whispers had it Tom Watkins was responsible. Tom was charged with being considerably less than a diplomat where the cash customers were concerned.

Poor attendance was blamed on good old Tom for many years, and then one day he sold out—lock, stock and barrel. There was a great reorganization. And the band played on—rhapsody in blue, red ink on the ledger.

Sometimes Memphis led the league and maintained a sizzling pace. But it was never reflected in the attendance figures. The fans went elsewhere.

There may be a new day coming. Anyway, it's to be a season to end all seasons of alibis as to why a great town such as Memphis doesn't pay its way in the great national pastime.

Reasons are numerous. Doc Prothro is back as manager. Cotton is king in Memphis.

A dog track across the river, long blamed for luring baseball fans away, is not to be opened. Only war is left for an excuse, but it won't be accepted unless the baseball season is curtailed.

'Bundles' for Japan The old stars of sports in the interest of national defense yesterday. Uncle Sam needs zinc, and in the making of a newspaper cut zinc is the all-important element.

So the call rang out for any cuts that could be spared. We went to work on the celebrities of all fields of sports, celebrities past and present. We saved only the ones—in metal—that were irreplaceable.

Helen Willis Moody, Bill Tilden, Jack Dempsey, Bob Jones, Alexa Sterling, Harry Cooper, Johnny Weismuller, Bobby Walthour, Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Tris Speaker, Hans Wagner, Red Grange, Red Baron, Judy Harlan, Bob McWhorter, W. A. Alexander, Wallace Butts and Spec Towns. These were just a few whose metal likeness went for all-out defense.

Ironically, we sent everything we had of Max Schmeling, Primo Carnera, Baron von Cramm and Walter Neusel. We didn't save a thing. We wanted these characters who had made money out of American sports to do a little—every little bit helps—in behalf of U. S. defense.

We saved a cut of one modern athlete, fearing we might not be able to find the same negative. It was a fetching likeness of Charlie Yates, with that familiar homely grin.

"How'da doin', boy!" The likeness seemed to say. "Good to see ya!"

Charlie will grin his way through this war—and when he comes back we're going to run that same metal likeness which was taken after he returned from Europe, having won the British amateur.

In Short They're saying that the American league's ninth ball club is training to win a pennant for Uncle Sam. . . . Here's the lineup: Catcher, Ken Silvestri; Yanks; pitchers, Bob Feller, Cleveland; Mickey Harris and Earl Johnson, Red Sox; Charley Stancean and Steve Peek, Yanks; first base, Johnny Sturm, Yanks, and Greenberg; second base, Benny McCoy, A's; shortstop, Cecil Travis, Senators, and third base, Buddy Lewis, Senators; outfield, Ted Williams, of the Red Sox; Sam Chapman, of the A's; Joe Grace, of the Browns, and Soup Campbell, of the Indians.

The Celtics are an institution in Memphis, "built solidly by the class of the game they play," writes David Bloom in the Commercial Appeal. "To Memphis they represent the top of the sport, because in 13 visits no team has been able to do much more than come close to them."

As Georgia Tech opened spring football practice there were prospects of Eddie Prokop and Alfred Berman developing into a couple of the Southeast's leading sophomore backfield performers.

Flash! No longer will they be known as the Phillies. They'll be just plain Phils. The streamlined name is in line with Hans Lobert's plans for a streamlined cellar team.

Hoben, Tippens Eisenberg Top Loop Scorers

Tech High Best Defensive Five; Boys' High, Typists Lead Attack.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS. Boys' High, Tech High and Canton seem destined to engage in a smoking-hot duel right down to the wire in the well-balanced Big Six Basketball League as the second half gets under way with three games here today and one tonight.

Coach Dwight Keith's Boys' High, deadlocked with Swede Phillips' Tech High for the halfway mark leadership, faces a dangerous G. A. A. quint at College Park this afternoon, while the Smithies will wait until 8 o'clock tonight to take Grady court against the cellar-inhabiting Marist crew. Canton, running only a full game behind the leading pair, will tackle Rufus Godwin's hustling Commercial High outfit at the Boys' Club this afternoon.

TRIPLE-HEADER. The Smithie-Marist engagement will be part of a triple-header. The Tech High faculty is slated to crack onto the court against an equally antiquated Bass Junior High faculty five at 7 o'clock, and a 9 o'clock tilt finds Lewis Baker's Sewell Service girls set to pull hair with Joe Bean's Georgia Power Trojans, with the victor gaining the right to play Walthour lassies for the first-half City League title.

The Constitution's statistical bureau went into a huddle over the weekend to come up with some interesting highlights on the Big Six loop's first-half play. Coach Phillips' Smithies were found to be the best defensive team, allowing opponents only 107 points while they scored 135 in five franchises.

STRONG OFFENSE. Coach Keith's Purple Hurricane and Coach Godwin's Typists tied for offensive honors with each quint tallying 168 points, but Commercial proved to be rather poor as a defensive outfit. Only non-winning Marist allowed opponents to hoop more points. The Cadets gave up 192, and the Typists 190.

Strangely, neither Tech High nor Boys' High, tied for the loop lead, has a man in the running for high-point honors. A red-hot duel for the lead is under way between G. M. A.'s Mike Hoben, Michigan southpaw, Canton's Bud Tippens, and Commercial's David Eisenberg. Hoben is out front now with 62. Tippens has 56 and Eisenberg 55. The next man, Boys' High's Charles Brooks, is far short of the pacesetters with 39.

Moon Maiden Wins At Hialeah Park

MIAMI, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Moon Maiden, a stalemate of the mighty Challenged, won the Mariposa purse at Hialeah Park today, winning the six and a half furlong dash for fillies and mares by a length and a half from Mrs. Vera S. Bragg's Transient.

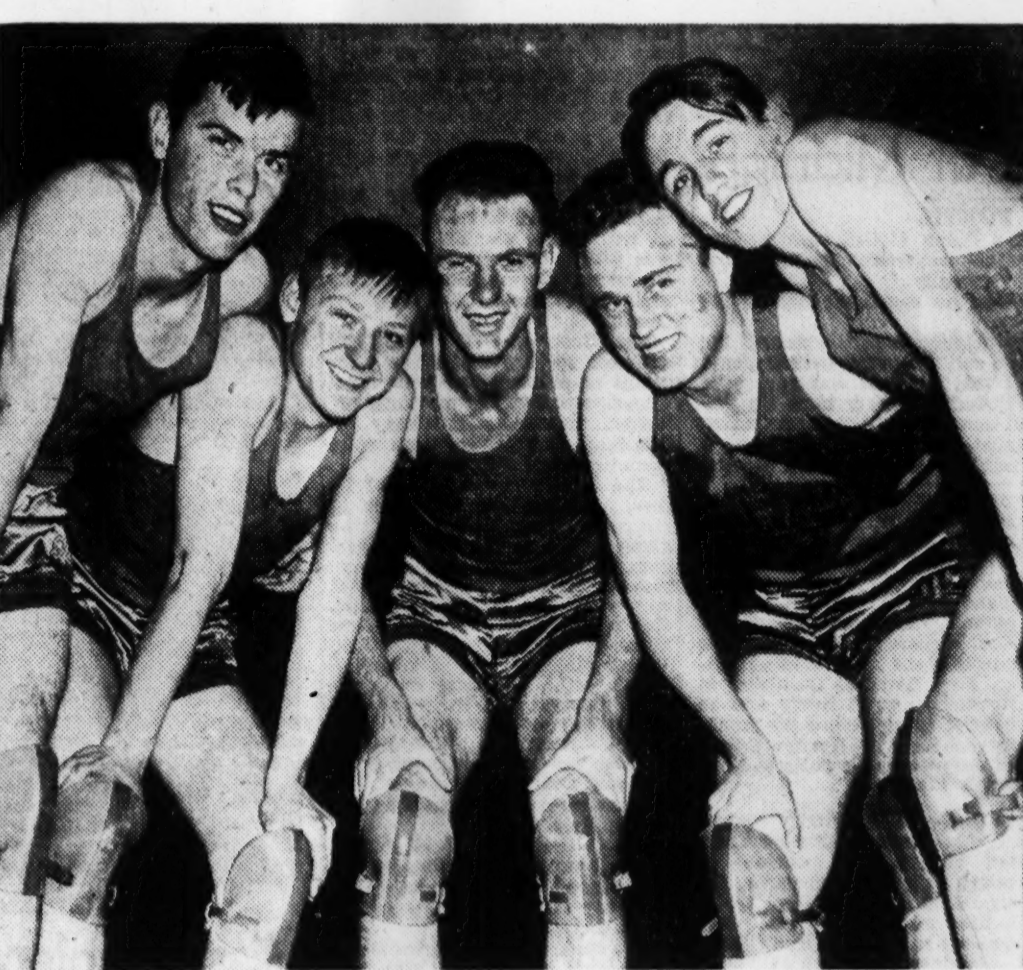

The W. L. Brann standard bearer went the distance in 1:18.1-5 and repaid her backers with $5.80 for $2. Third money went to Herbert M. Woolf's Incolassie.

4th Tiger Coach Called by Army

CLEMSON, S. C., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Walter Cox, Clemson College line coach for the last two years, received orders today to report for Army duty on February 18. Cox was the fourth Tiger coach to be called. Others were End Coach Bob Jones and Freshman Assistant Randy Hinson and a Backfield Coach Covington McMillan.

Poss Will Fete Bulldogs Tonight

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 9.—The University of Georgia football squad will be honored tonight by R. E. Poss, who annually gives the boys a big barbecue dinner at his place of business on the Atlanta highway. The selection of a captain for the next team usually takes place on this occasion, but Coach Wallace Butts said today he believed it would be a good idea to defer the choice in view of the fact that some of the boys may be drafted before next fall. The Poss dinner annually is one of the features of the "banquet league." There are no talks or speeches. The boys and coaches merely fill up on choice pork and lamb and hash. Atlanta sports writers have also been invited.

THEY CAME THROUGH—These boys were on Coach Swede Phillips' Tech High second team when the season opened but they have been crashing the starting lineup and all have seen heavy duty all season. Their brilliant play has helped put the Smithies in a tie for first place with Boys' High as the Big Six League season reached the halfway point. The second half starts tonight. The Smithies will play cellar-dwelling Marist at the Henry Grady court. Left to right here are Waddie Gantt, Bill Miller, Wallace Carter, Arthur Chambers and Glenn Holbrook.

Strong Quints Gird for NGIC Tournament

Canton, Decatur, Athens Seen as Favorites; West Fulton Is Host.

By HENRY DAILEY.

When around 15 members of the North Georgia Interscholastic Conference congregate here in early March for the 1942 basketball tournament, one of the loop's youngest members, West Fulton, will be in the role of host.

West Fulton joined the league only three years ago and since then has given a good account of itself against older schools. The Bankhead institution inaugurated its new gymnasium just before Christmas and when school officials bid for the '42 tournament at the conference's December meeting, the site was accepted without opposition.

The Canton High Greenies, winners in 1941, again appear to be the strongest team, with such stars as Bud Tipton, Allen Hardin and Slim McCurry. Coach B. D. Carroll's quintet has been beaten only a couple of times this season and are making a fine showing in the Big Six loop against some of the strongest teams in the state.

Such teams as Decatur, North Fulton and others cannot be counted out by any means, however. Decatur has high-scoring Frank (The Red) Broyles to pace its high-powered attack. The Bulldogs have run up enormous scores against most of their opponents and are rated strongest among Atlanta's nine potential entries.

North Fulton's Bulldogs have Harris, Whitlow and Coleman back from last year's runner-up five and should make another stout title bid.

Perry Roberts, Marist; Grady Akins, Richardson; Arthur Gross, Russell; Leo Barber, Hapeville; Coley Daniels, Fulton, and Billy Hartsfield, West Fulton, give their teams something to speculate about in their chances of reaching the finals. Druid Hills is capable of giving most of them a battle.

Augusta Sale Is Approved By Directors

Haberlin To Be New President; Arky Biggs Remains as Manager.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Formal signing of papers for sale of the Augusta franchise in the South Atlantic Baseball league to James Carroll Haberlin and Dr. B. W. Kendall, both of Columbia, S. C., was arranged today.

The circuit's board of directors yesterday approved the sale to the two South Carolinians by Troy Agnew, the present owner. The sale calls for a $3,000 down payment with $3,000 more in installments.

Haberlin will be the new president of the Augusta club and he said Dr. Kendall would be "a silent partner."

Haberlin is 31 years old, a graduate of Holy Cross University, and an official in a company operating concessions at the Columbia (S. C.) baseball park. He said he planned to resign that position immediately and move to Augusta. Dr. Kendall operates a fleet of taxicabs in Columbia.

The two men announced they would keep Arky Biggs as manager of the club. Haberlin promised Biggs his full co-operation and urged him to begin looking immediately for players. He said he would announce spring training plans for the Tigers later.

Robert Lamotte, Charleston director, was elected vice president of the league, succeeding Agnew. Other directors attending the meeting were Kenneth Cass, Greenville, S. C.; Crowther Boyd, Jacksonville, Fla.; Roy Williams, Macon, Ga.; Earl Elue, Columbia, S. C.; Martin G. (Chick) Autry, Savannah, and Andy French, Columbus, Ga.

Conn and Louis To Box in June

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Promoter Mike Jacobs said today Billy Conn definitely would be the June opponent of Joe Louis, regardless of how the Pittsburgh pretty boy's fight Friday night with Tony Zale turns out.

"Conn will get the spot, regardless," Jacobs said just before boarding a plane for New York. He added that Lou Nova would have to "get and beat a couple of guys before he can hope for another Louis match."

COWS AND CONTRACTS.

WINS 2 PLACES.

In the Derby Roy Persons, of Monticello, took two places with a setter and a pointer. His Kelspot, a sprightly little setter, won over six entries. She located two coveys and ran a good ground race. Jake, owned by Mr. Potter and handled by Mrs. Atwood, was runner-up, while Persons' pointer entry, Gunfire, wound up third.

Westbrook Bob, highly regarded pointer owned by Cruger Westbrook, of Albany, furnished the big gallery an interesting show, dividing his time between instructions from Handler Richard Tift and pep talks from his owner. He might have fared better had he not been so eager to follow two sets of signals.

JACKING ALBANY POINTS: Raymond Hoagland, of Cartersville, was elected president of the Southern Field Trial Club, succeeding Major Trammell Scott, who was named chairman of the directors. John Phillips, of Albany, succeeded Hollis Lanier as vice president and Hudson Malone, also of Albany, was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Spunky Creek Nina's performance, which gave her second place in the Quail Championship, was the biggest surprise of the bird dog classic. . . . Her owner, Larry Henning, Wisconsin's heavyweight brewer, is celebrating with an extended vacation along the gulf coast and is waiting until after the National at Grand Junction to go back home. . . . Little Hillbright Susannah again provided the big heartbreak. . . . She was the gallery favorite, but wandered out of the picture the last day, duplicating her fate in last year's National when she was close to the title before finding a covey and staying on it in a ditch for an hour. Thus M. G. Dudley still held his title as the greatest owner-sufferer in the game.

Vols Need Outfielder, Hurler

Gilbert Is Due Seven Players From Majors

Roy Marion, Atlanta Boy, Seeks To Break Into Lineup at Short.

By RAYMOND JOHNSON, Sports Editor Tennesseean.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 9.—Larry Gilbert needs another outfielder and one more starting hurler to be ready for the opening of the Southern League campaign.

The Vol skipper will have the smallest squad that any Nashville club has had at the spring training camp in history. Only 22 players are on the roster at present and two of these probably will be sent to one of the farms before March 5, the day the battymen will report at Baton Rouge, La., Nashville's spring base for the second straight season.

Gilbert has only the remnants of the club which won the 1941 Shaugnessy playoff and then swept through Dallas in four straight games in the Dixie Series.

Not a single one of the outfielders will be back. Les Fleming and Dick Culler are gone from the infield. Three pitchers and the second-string catcher also will be missing.

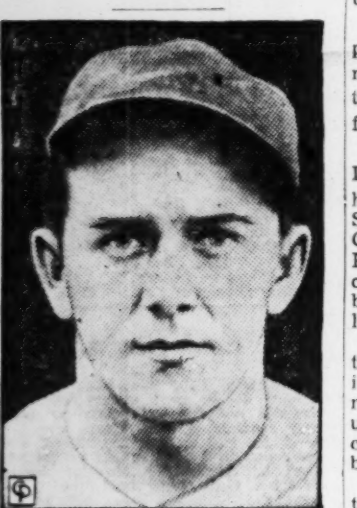

The lineup which Larry expects to have for the exhibition games will include Johnny Nook at first, Johnny Mihalic at second, either Paeky Rogers or Roy Marion, an Atlanta boy, at short, Charlie English on third, Jim Shilling in left, Dutch McCall in center and Gus Dugas in right. Hank Helf will be back at the first string catcher.

Holdover pitchers are: George Jeffcoat, Leo Twardy, John Sain, Vito Tamulis and Charlie Gassaway. The most promising of the young hurlers is Charlie Prescott, who won 17 games for Hot Springs last summer.

MARION HIT .367.

Nook came up from Montgomery where he has spent the past two summers. Marion, who is the brother of Martin and Johnny, was at Hot Springs last season and hit .367. McCall, a Nashville boy, was another Hot Springs performer.

Johnny Mihalic and Gus Dugas were both shelved in the first half of the 1941 campaign with broken ankles. Mihalic cracked his sliding into home at Knoxville on May 26 and Dugas fractured his sliding into second at Atlanta on June 14. Both believe their ankles are in excellent condition and are anticipating successful seasons.

Wayne Sabin Wins Gulf Stream Match

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 9.—Wayne Sabin, one of tennis' newest professionals, swung unerringly in the $1,200 Gulf Stream tournament here today to defeat Ed Stillman, of St. Augustine, in love sets.

No upsets occurred during today's 13 first round matches, second-seeded Welby Van Horn defeating George Lyman, of Miami, 6-0, 6-1, and third-seeded Dick Skeen outlasting Allen Behr, of Palm Beach, 6-3, 6-3, 6-3.

Jack Hancock Misses First Tech Grid Drill

Scholastic Difficulties Hit Veteran Wingback; 57 Candidates Answer Alex's 23d Annual Call.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

William Anderson Alexander started his 23d year as head coach of Georgia Tech's football team yesterday when he assembled 57 candidates for the first day of spring practice.

Things went just as they always do on opening day. Bobby Dodd took the backs, Mack Tharpe the linemen. But they further divided the squad a little later with Coach Alex handling what few ends were present, Ray McArthur the blocking backs and a gent named Miller the centers.

Mr. Miller, whose first name is Bob, played center for Ohio State a couple of years ago under Francis Schmidt. He is now teaching at Georgia Tech and will help out with the football team this spring.

Absent from the workout was Jack Hancock, veteran wingback who has run into scholastic difficulties and may not be able to complete his career. Jack Marshall, first string end, was the only other absentee and his was excused because of basketball activities. Both Stinky Stein and Tom Anderson, who have been playing on the cage squad, reported for grid drills.

Coach Alex said practices would start at 5 o'clock because of the new year time. Classes now run from 9 a. m. till 5 p. m. instead of 8 to 4. Coaches were busy calling their wives, arranging for later dinner hours.

Robert E. Lee Dodd casually remarked "this new time will give me plenty of time to play 18 holes before practice every day."

Several boys on the team have been changed from one position to another and many more will be tried out at several jobs. But nothing will be definite for quite a while. Most of spring drills is devoted to experimentation, anyhow.

Workouts will last an hour and a half a day and the whole thing will be over in six weeks. And that's all to report at this time.

Paul, who owns a farm across the county from Dizzy, said he would not be interested in playing ball unless it was with Dallas, of the Texas League. He quit last year when the Cardinals wanted to send him to the Pacific Coast League.

"Playing with Dallas ought to be a good set-up for me," grinned Paul. "I could do the kicking in the morning, run the filling station in the daytime and pitch for Dallas at night."

Wildcats Rout Alabama, 50-34

LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 9.—Kentucky's Wildcats settled down after a rough first half to rout Alabama, 50-34, in a Southeastern Conference basketball game and gain revenge for a previous defeat at the hands of Bama.

Early in the game, big Jim Roth, Alabama guard, was ejected by Referee Bowser Chest for unnecessary roughness, but the Crimson Tide fought Kentucky to a 21-21 standoff in the half.

The Wildcats paid more attention to scoring in the second half and in the first 15 minutes ran the count to 43-27 to virtually decide the issue.

In a final five-game block against a picked Rome, Ga., team, the local Genuine Parts team of the Gate City League were defeated by a margin of 2,746 to 2,569 pins. Morris, of the Rome team, led with a fine set of 578, including games of 129 and 148. Wiley topped the Atlanta team with a set of 556.

Albert Riley Lost To Macon Paper

MACON, Ga., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Albert Riley Jr., sports editor of the Macon Evening News, quit his desk here today for the duration and arranged to report for active duty with the United States Navy. Enlisting as yeoman, third class, he was sworn into service with orders to join the aviation cadet selection board, under Lieutenant Commander S. M. Nordhouse, in Atlanta, February 11. He becomes the fourth member of the Macon Telegraph and News editorial staffs to join the armed forces since Pearl Harbor, and the fifth to enlist since last autumn.

MacPhail Puts Dodgers Out Of Golf Meet

Durocher and Joe Medwick Ordered Not To Play at Sarasota.

SARASOTA, Fla., Feb. 9.—(AP)—President Larry MacPhail has forbidden the Brooklyn Dodgers to compete in the annual Baseball Players' Golf tournament starting at Miami Wednesday, but George R. Jacobus, director of the event, says it won't make much difference anyway.

Manager Leo Durocher disclosed MacPhail's instructions here today. "After all, a lot of major golf tournaments have been cancelled by the men who make their living at it, and Mr. MacPhail didn't think the Brooklyn Dodgers should play in any tournaments," Durocher explained.

"This country is at war. Besides, we are down here to go into spring training and Mr. MacPhail didn't think the Dodgers should be connected with any unnecessary publicity like golf tournaments."

MacPhail's orders eliminated Durocher, Joe Medwick and Ted McGraw, all Sarasota winter residents, from the tournament.

Jacobus, recalling that no Dodger had ever won the event, said, "I am very sorry. It won't affect the tourney much, though, as we were only expecting Durocher, McGraw and Medwick to enter anyway. The Dodgers are the only club to take such a stand."

Perry Always In Shape; Tops As Competitor

Handsome, debonair Frederick John Perry, erstwhile of the British Isles, and now the proud possessor of his "first papers" as an American citizen, is the finest tennis player developed in Great Britain in the last three decades.

Perry will appear here at the City auditorium on the $100,000 professional tennis tour February 23, along with Don Budge, Frank Kovacs and Bobby Riggs.

Perry was instrumental in capturing the Davis cup from France in 1933. He then turned professional in 1937, Don Budge led the United States team to Davis cup triumph.

Northside Tennis Club, which is sponsoring the show, announces that noncommissioned officers or soldiers of the United States armed forces will be admitted to general admission for half price, but must be in uniform. Ticket reservations may be made by calling Vernon 6332.

Naval Air Unit To Arrive at Athens April 9

University Busy Arranging Quarters for 600 Men, Officers.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 9.—(AP)—The University of Georgia—newly designated as a regional "Annapolis of the Air" for the U. S. Navy—arranged today for quartering 600 men and officers, the first contingent of 2,300 who are to train here as Naval Air Corps pilots.

Chancellor S. V. Sanford of the University System said the Navy would send its first group to Georgia April 9 and follow it with units of 300 every two weeks thereafter until the school has a total of 2,000 student pilots and 300 officers and instructors.

Dr. Sanford said the Navy announced it would supply all blankets, bedding and lockers needed by the men, and added officers from Charleston, S. C., would come here Wednesday or Thursday to check on needs.

Naval cadets sent to Georgia—one of four regional schools in the nation—are to undertake a preliminary three-month course. This is to include basic training physical conditioning, study of naval history and customs, military drill and seamanship, and training in communication, ordnance and other specialties.

After passing the preliminary course, cadets are to be sent to one of the 16 Naval Reserve aviation bases for primary flight training, and thence to one of the Navy's advance flying schools.

The entire flight training is expected to require one year.

In Washington, the physical fitness program was promised to be "the most strenuous in the history of American military training."

The cadets are to learn to march "up to the top of the world," "downwind," and are to engage in heavy labor such as ditchdigging, wood-chopping and land-clearing. The groups also are to be schooled in self-defense arts such as jujitsu, boxing and rough-and-tumble fighting.

Cadets are to be quartered on the main campus of the university, which is to be compensated by the government for cadets' subsistence. Officers and working personnel are expected to obtain living quarters in the city.

Yugoslavia's Patriot Army Swells Rolls

AT THE GERMAN FRONTIER, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Axis efforts to crush Balkan warfare waged against them by Yugoslav patriots have failed utterly, and reports even from German and Italian sources today indicated the movement was growing.

There is no reliable estimate about the size of General Draga Mihailovic's forces operating in South Siberia and Bosnia, but reports in the Belgrade and Zagreb press indicate the army is increasing.

Reports reaching Budapest recently said the patriots were organized into two groups of about 10,000 each. These were broken into smaller units and scattered throughout the country.

Small Air Force.

Some reports said the patriots even had a small air force, operating from hidden fields in the mountains.

The extent of their operations is indicated by reports appearing in the Yugoslav press every day or so claiming 50 to 100 "Communists" were killed by regular troops.

These dispatches never give losses of the regulars, but sometimes there are references to a "strict order" or some other leader being killed, with machine gunnades to officials visiting hospitals in Bosnia, where soldiers wounded in guerrilla warfare were being treated.

The extent of the Axis losses was suggested by the fact that the Italians reported they alone had 388 soldiers killed and 487 wounded in the Yugoslav area in December.

Within one week, the Belgrade newspaper Novostre reported three battles in which 160 irregulars were killed.

Rails Interrupted.

Railroads have been forced to change schedules of trains between Sofia, Bulgaria, and Belgrade so the trains may travel entirely in daylight. Each train is accompanied by a detachment of German soldiers armed with machine guns.

As another precaution, the trains are preceded about a half mile by a Serbian locomotive carrying soldiers.

Many sections of railways in interior Yugoslavia have been closed completely because the lines were cut by the armed forces of the patriots. At Sarajevo announced recently that the line from there to Dubrovnik had been removed, but that the section between Tassava and Bičevac still was closed while troops were cleaning up the area.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—(AP)—The stock market negotiated an orderly retreat today in the face of a somewhat cloudier Far Pacific war picture.

Trends slipped at the start and declines ran to well over a point or 7 Am stock to a little support appeared. Fractional recessions were widely distributed at the close, with scattered leaders a shade above their lows.

Lightening of commitments and the withdrawal of bids in many cases was attributed mainly to fears for the outcome of the Singapore siege and some apprehension over General MacArthur's position in the Philippines.

Most steels, rubbers, oils, aircrafts, coppers and utilities kept to narrow territory.

In a drifting curb minus signs were attached to Bell Aircraft, American Gas, Electric Bond & Share and a Republic Aviation.

Ahead moderately were Lake Shore, Pennroad and Niagara Hudson Power.

Bond prices drifted sluggishly lower today, some issues dropping more than a point and few able to buck the downturn.

Rails turned soft toward midday and finished near the bottom.

Utilities and industrials held their ground.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—(AP)—

The stock market negotiated an orderly retreat today in the face of a somewhat cloudier Far Pacific war picture.

Trends slipped at the start and declines ran to well over a point or 7 Am stock to a little support appeared. Fractional recessions were widely distributed at the close, with scattered leaders a shade above their lows.

Lightening of commitments and the withdrawal of bids in many cases was attributed mainly to fears for the outcome of the Singapore siege and some apprehension over General MacArthur's position in the Philippines.

Most steels, rubbers, oils, aircrafts, coppers and utilities kept to narrow territory.
